HAPPY BIRTHDAY 1934 1984 DONALD DUCK

Donald Duck's 50th Birthday features a special parade and show this summer. Nightly fireworks begin 6/16.

Owner Gene Autry sits in the dugout with manager John McNamara before a game.

Gene Autry

by John Hall

Gene Autry, at 76, the man who officiated at the birth of the American League Angels in 1960 when he put down $1.2 million and pulled them out of an expansion hat, is still searching for his first pennant after 23 seasons.

There have been some good times and some bad times and a lot in between. There have been two American West division titles, the long summer strike of 1981, the introduction of arbitration, and the particular frustration of getting to within one win of the World Series in 1982. There were also the injuries, the hard luck and the 92-loss collapse of 1983.

Yet, the legendary and beloved "Cowboy" of radio, recording, rodeo and movie fame in the 30s and 40s, seems more enthusiastic than ever as his Angels launch their 24th season, their 19th in Anaheim Stadium.

Is he? A few days before the first pitch of 1984, he sat in his second floor office at his Gene Autry Hotel in Palm Springs and warmly answered all the questions in an update of the feelings and intentions of the majority owner, president and chairman of the board of the franchise.

Question. If you knew then what you know now about owning a baseball franchise, would you do it again? Would you buy a club as you did on that fateful day, December 6, 1960, in St. Louis?

Answer. Yes . . . Oh, yes. It's been a great adventure, a lot of fun. It was probably more fun in the earlier years. We had some of the greatest characters. Players have changed a lot. The personalities are different. We're not as close as we all used to be. But I still admire all of them very much. And I love the game just as much. I've always loved the game. I'll be there for all 81 of our home games again. That's the part that's always best, the game.

Q. You look good. How's your health?

A. Good. Very good. I feel good. I plan to be active at least another 10 years.

Q. There are two new vice presidents in the organization this year, your wife Jackie and John Hays. Will there be significant changes in the daily operation of the ballclub?

A. No. Buzzie Bavasi is still running the baseball, and Red Patterson is still our main liaison with the community. And, as always, all final decisions will come down to me. But, let's face it, some of the spring has gone out of the chicken. I'm 76, Red is 75 and Buzzie is 68. He's told me several times he doesn't want to keep doing so much. I thought it was a good time to add some younger people. We can always use help. Jackie knows money. As you know, she was a banker. Her advice is always good and her suggestions sound. John Hays has a tremendous background in marketing. We have been fortunate in drawing so well the past two seasons and we are doing a pretty good job, but we want to keep improving the way we present our product. We're looking way ahead, too, to new possibilities such as cable television . . . other things like that. We want to warm things up for our fans and our employees, too. We want them to know how important they are to us and how much they're appreciated.

Q. Gene Mauch and Mike Port are in the front office, too, identified as director of player personnel and vice president/chief administrative officer.

A. Yes, we were very happy when Gene Mauch came back to the Angels. We wanted him to do more, but he didn't want to be confined to an office. He's out in the ballparks again, though, looking at the talent and helping us find it. He'll be a superscout, too, along the lines of the things Frank Lane, Herman Franks and Bill Rigney previously did for us. Mike Port is invaluable to us. He is our expert on baseball law. He knows more about baseball law than anybody in the game.

Q. What about 1984?

A. We're going to be better, of course. All we have to do is stay healthy. I don't think anybody can explain all the things that went wrong last year. It was a strange, strange season for a lot of us. Everybody seemed to go haywire. Whitey (Herzog) and the St. Louis Cardinals were way down, too, and they were coming off a world championship season. Kansas City and Milwaukee, too, both very good clubs the previous year. Some things never make sense. Two young players who look like they're going to make a big difference are Curt Kaufman, the relief pitcher we got from the Yankees, and Gary Pettis, who got Fred Lynn to move to right field. Pettis is as fast as anybody I've seen for a long time.

Q. There has been talk you have grown tired of spending so much money on aging free agents and that the Angels in the future will concentrate strictly on their farm system and developing their own.

A. Well, maybe. We've got one of the biggest payrolls in baseball, about $13 million, and we still haven't gotten into a World Series. But I've got no regrets about the money we've spent. Most of our free agents have been worth it. In particular, Reggie Jackson, for instance, has earned every penny and then some. I like him very much. When we were first thinking about signing him, we asked Bob Lemon about him, and Lem said, "he may be controversial, but Reggie always gives you everything he's got" and Lem was right, that's true. Even last season when he was having a rough time, Reggie gave everything he had. He's good box office and he's been good for us and good for baseball. If there are other free agents like Reggie around, I'm not so sure we won't go for them. We did our best to get Goose Gossage for the bullpen. We offered him $1.5 million a year for five years, but it evidently wasn't good enough. I'm a firm believer in good names on the marquee. In MGM's golden years, it didn't matter much what the movie was, it was the name on the marquee. If it was Gable or Spencer Tracy or Lana Turner up there, business was going to be good.

Q. What about the future of baseball in general?

A. I'm sure it will be OK, but we've got some problems ahead of us that must be worked out. A new contract with the players' union is coming up in 1985, and I still am opposed to the arbitration system in settling contract stalemates. I warned the other owners and the players it wouldn't work. And it hasn't. Arbitration is the worst thing ever to happen to baseball. To the players as well as management. The thing that's the most stupid about it is that they always get somebody who knows absolutely nothing about the game and its values to make the rulings. We might as well flip a coin the way it is. The players sometimes get much more than they should and sometimes much less. There's no balance, no pattern. It is absolutely crazy. There's no logic to any of it . . . Otherwise, the game, for the fans, is better than ever. It is being played at a higher level than ever before.

Q. Despite some of the changes in the game and the attitudes and no matter what the number of frustrations, you always seem to have a special twinkle in your eye when talking about baseball or watching a game. Is there still some "little boy" in those who play it and those who watch it?

A. God, I hope so. Roy Campanella was the first to say there had to be a little boy inside of an adult to be either a player or fan. I know there's still a lot of that inside me.

Q. When you actually were a little boy, were you like most others? Did you want to become a major leaguer?

A. Well, I thought about it, of course. But not so much as a boy. It was later when I had a radio show in Chicago. I played baseball in high school in Tioga.

Q. Tioga?

A. Tioga, Texas. I was born in Tioga. It's about 60 miles north of Dallas. We had a farm just outside of town.

Q. It was a long way from Tioga to Hollywood.

A. Yes, it was, and there was no road that went directly. My first job was in Tioga with the Texas Pacific Railroad in 1925. I learned the telegraph in Tioga. I helped unload baggage and I delivered telegrams.

Q. The legend has it that you were discovered by Will Rogers in the telegraph room at the railroad station in Chelsea, Oklahoma.

A. I left Tioga to take a job with the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad. We called it The Frisco. The job was in Chelsea, and I was there until 1930. The railroads were in pretty bad shape then, just like they always are. Employees were being laid off. It looked like I was going to be one of the ones laid off. I tried to do something about it. Will Rogers had a sister in Chelsea. He used to visit her regularly and I had played my guitar and sung for him a few times. He liked what he heard and encouraged me. I thought to myself, "If Will Rogers likes your singing, others might, too, and if HE thinks you're good enough to be on radio, maybe you ARE," and I took off for New York. I had enough money saved to make a couple of records.

Q. And the rest is history.

A. Not quite. Not much happened in New York. I headed for Chicago, and that's where I got on radio on WSL. I was there until 1934.

Q. That took a lot of courage, didn't it? Just taking off from a small town like Chelsea and going for it in the big cities without really having a job or knowing anybody?

A. I had a lot of ambition and I was willing to work. I got lucky in Chicago. The radio show went well. We also had a Saturday night barn dance, and that's when I got close to baseball again. The Cubs liked the radio show. I got going to Wrigley Field regularly, even took infield a few times with the Cubs and some of the visiting teams. Somebody from the visiting teams at both Wrigley and Comiskey Park was always showing up at the barn dance. Babe Ruth came once. Lou Gehrig, too. I got particularly close to some of the St. Louis Cardinals. Those were the Gas House Gang years. Dizzy Dean and I were good friends. He was always my favorite. I might have stayed forever in Chicago, but a man named Herbert Yates talked me into going to Hollywood to make a movie.

Q. And the rest is history.

A. Not quite. There was a lot of luck involved here, too. Herbert Yates was financing Nat Levine, who specialized in making movie serials. Levine was looking for the money to make a Ken Maynard movie. Before investing, Yates told Levine about me. Levine intended to make a standard western like any other Ken Maynard or Hoot Gibson movie. Yates told him, "Why don't you try a singing cowboy? We've got one singing in Chicago on the radio." So they made the picture with Ken Maynard as the star and me singing a few songs. The movie was a success, and mainly because the people who had been buying my records supported the movie. I was singing for the American Record Corporation, which is now Columbia Records, and I had sold quite a few records in Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa, and that's where the movie had its biggest play. Levine was impressed. Then, I told him I'd like to be in one of his serials. He put me in something called "The Phantom Empire." It turned out to be the first science-fiction picture ever made. We had things like two-way television screens before there was even television. Buck Rogers, Flash Gordon, Superman . . . they all came later. Our serial was a big hit.

Q. And THEN the rest is history.

A. Yes.

Q. But you never got over baseball. How did you ever find eight others for the team in Tioga?

A. It wasn't a high school team. Just sandlot. We'd round up enough people who liked baseball to just play. We'd choose up sides and have a game.

Gene and Reggie celebrate the 1982 Western Division Title.

Q. What was your position?

A. Infield, mostly second base. I was a better hitter than fielder. I admire great defensive players. But, like everybody else I guess, I get more excited about big hitters.

Q. As chairman of the board of the Angels, what is your biggest regret?

A. Not making a stronger effort to hold onto Nolan Ryan. In retrospect, we just shouldn't have let him get away in free agency. At the time, we thought he was asking too much. Now, it doesn't seem so much.

Q. How about your biggest satisfaction?

A. We've had many. Winning the division in 1979 with Jim Fregosi managing, always one of my favorites when he was our shortstop. That second expansion season long ago when we led the entire league on the Fourth of July in 1962 . . . Drawing over 5 million fans the last two seasons . . . But the single biggest, I think, was that very first win in our very first season on Opening Day in Baltimore in 1961. It seemed so important because everybody was saying we were going to be laughed right out of the American League, and we were opening against the favorites to win the pennant, and the manager of the Orioles was a personal close friend, Paul Richards, who had been kidding me for weeks about what they were going to do to us . . . and then Big Klu, Ted Kluszewski, hit two homers and Bob Cerv hit a homer and Eli Grba pitched a complete game. We won 7-2, and Paul Richards was stunned. And we knew, at least, that we had a major league baseball team. There have been a lot of great moments, but that one was the start of all the rest.

Q. Worst moment?

A. The final out in Milwaukee in 1982, I guess. We were so close to winning the pennant. We won the first two games of the league championships in Anaheim Stadium and needed just one more to get into the World Series against the Cardinals, my old favorite team managed by my good friend, Whitey. But we lost three straight in Milwaukee. It wasn't anybody's fault. You can't put your finger on those things. They happen. That's baseball. But after getting so close and looking so good, it was hard to take.

Q. If you had one wish?

A. That's easy. Obviously, right now, I'd ask for only one thing. A young pitcher to come along, a 20-game winner. I think that would be the difference in taking us all the way. Maybe we've already found him. Maybe this is the season.●

THE 1984 ANGELS

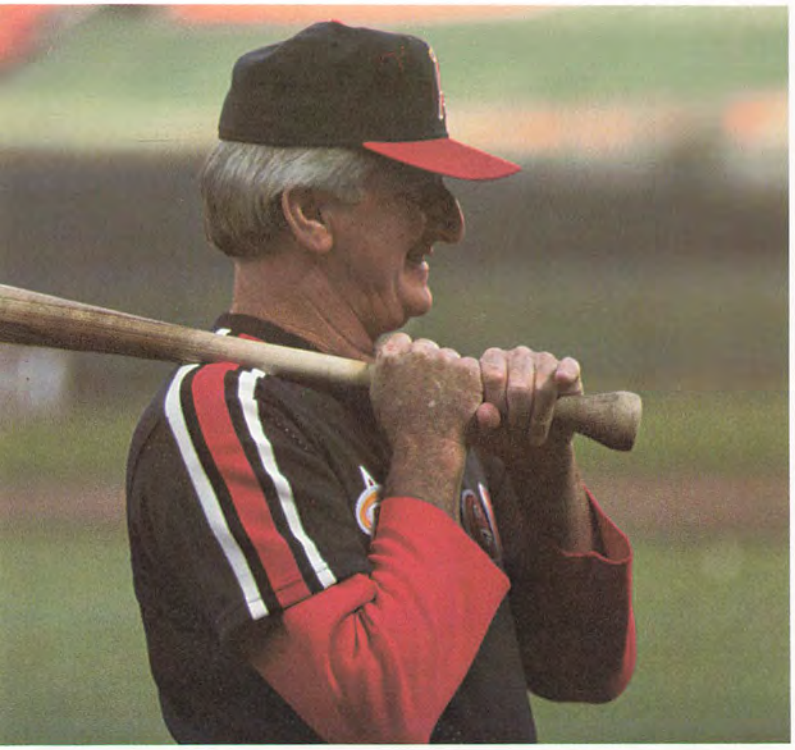

THE MANAGER

JOHN McNAMARA

John McNamara begins his second season as Angels manager in 1984, his 11th as a major league manager. He began his managerial career at age 26 in the minor leagues and remained in the minors for nine years before joining the Oakland A's as a coach in 1968. McNamara took over as Oakland's manager in September of 1969 and led the A's to a second place finish the following season. After a two-year stint as a coach with San Francisco (1971-1973) McNamara joined the fledgling Padres as manager in 1974. He managed San Diego for four seasons and spent the 1978 season as a coach with the Angels before moving to Cincinnati in 1979. He managed the Reds from 1979 to 1982 and directed the team to the National League West title in 1979. In 1981 his Reds posted the best over-all mark in baseball yet failed to appear in post-season competition during the strike-shortened season. McNamara returned to California in 1983.

THE COACHES

Conditioning coach Jimmie Reese begins his 67th year in professional baseball in 1984. His career, which began in 1917 when he served as a batboy for the Los Angeles Angels of the PCL, has included stints as a manager, coach, and scout. Reese has been with the Angels organization since 1972 and is known for having turned the task of fungo hitting into an art.

Third base coach Pedro Gomez enters his fourth season with the Angels in 1984. Gomez began his 40-year professional baseball career in 1944 as a shortstop for the Washington Senators. He has coached for Houston, St. Louis, and Los Angeles and has managed three major league clubs: San Diego (1969-72); Houston (1974-1975); and the Chicago Cubs (1980).

Manager John McNamara

1984 will mark Marcel Lachemann's first season as the Angels' pitching coach. He's spent the past two seasons as California's minor league pitching instructor and previously worked for Montreal in the minors. Lachemann spent three seasons as a player in the major leagues, pitching for Oakland from 1969-1971 and compiling a 7-4 record and a 3.45 ERA with five saves in 70 games as a reliever.

Bobby Knoop enters his sixth season as a member of the Angels' coaching staff in 1984, his fourth at first base. Knoop was drafted by the Angels at the 1963 Winter Meetings and was the club's MVP in 1964, 1965, 1966, and 1968. He was traded to the White Sox in 1969 and ended his career in 1972 with Kansas City. He spent several seasons managing in the minor leagues before joining the White Sox as third base coach in 1977.

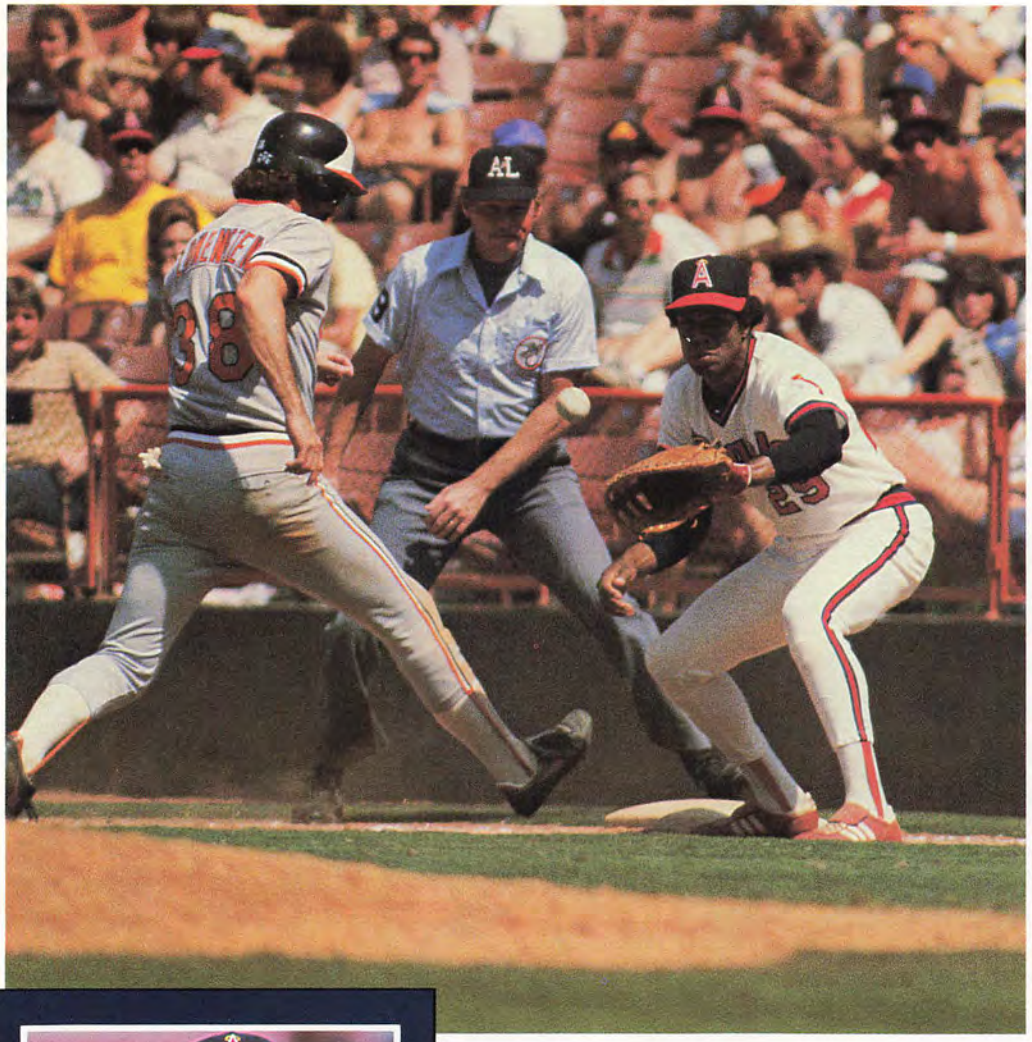

Bullpen coach Bob Clear enters his 40th season in professional baseball in 1984. The 56-year-old Clear first joined the Angels organization as a scout in 1969. He managed the Idaho Falls team from 1970 until 1973 and was named a special instructor in 1974. Clear was promoted to the major league club as first base coach in 1976. 1984 will mark his sixth season as bullpen coach.

1983 marked another banner year for Rod Carew. For the 15th consecutive season Carew passed the .300 mark, hitting for a club record .339 average in 1983. Rod was hitting at a .400 pace through the first half of the season and was the AL Player of the Month in May. His 44 multiple-hit games led the team while his .331 lifetime mark is the best among active players. Rod was also selected to his 17th consecutive All-Star team. In 1977 he was the league's MVP with a .388 average earning his sixth (of seven) batting titles. After coming to the Angels in a 1979 trade, he continued his impressive play and in 1982 established a club record with a 25-game hitting streak that stretched from May 23 to June 21.

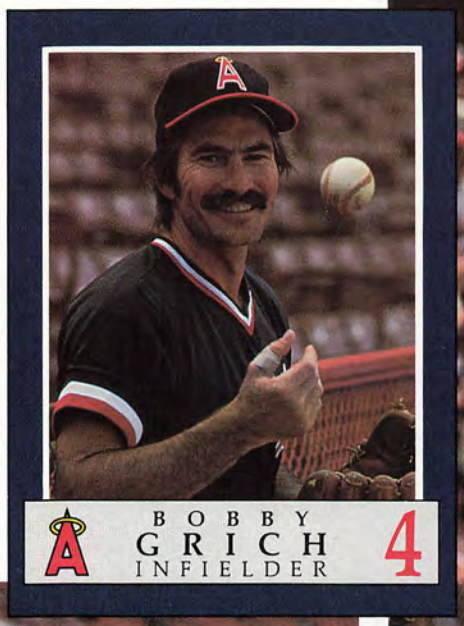

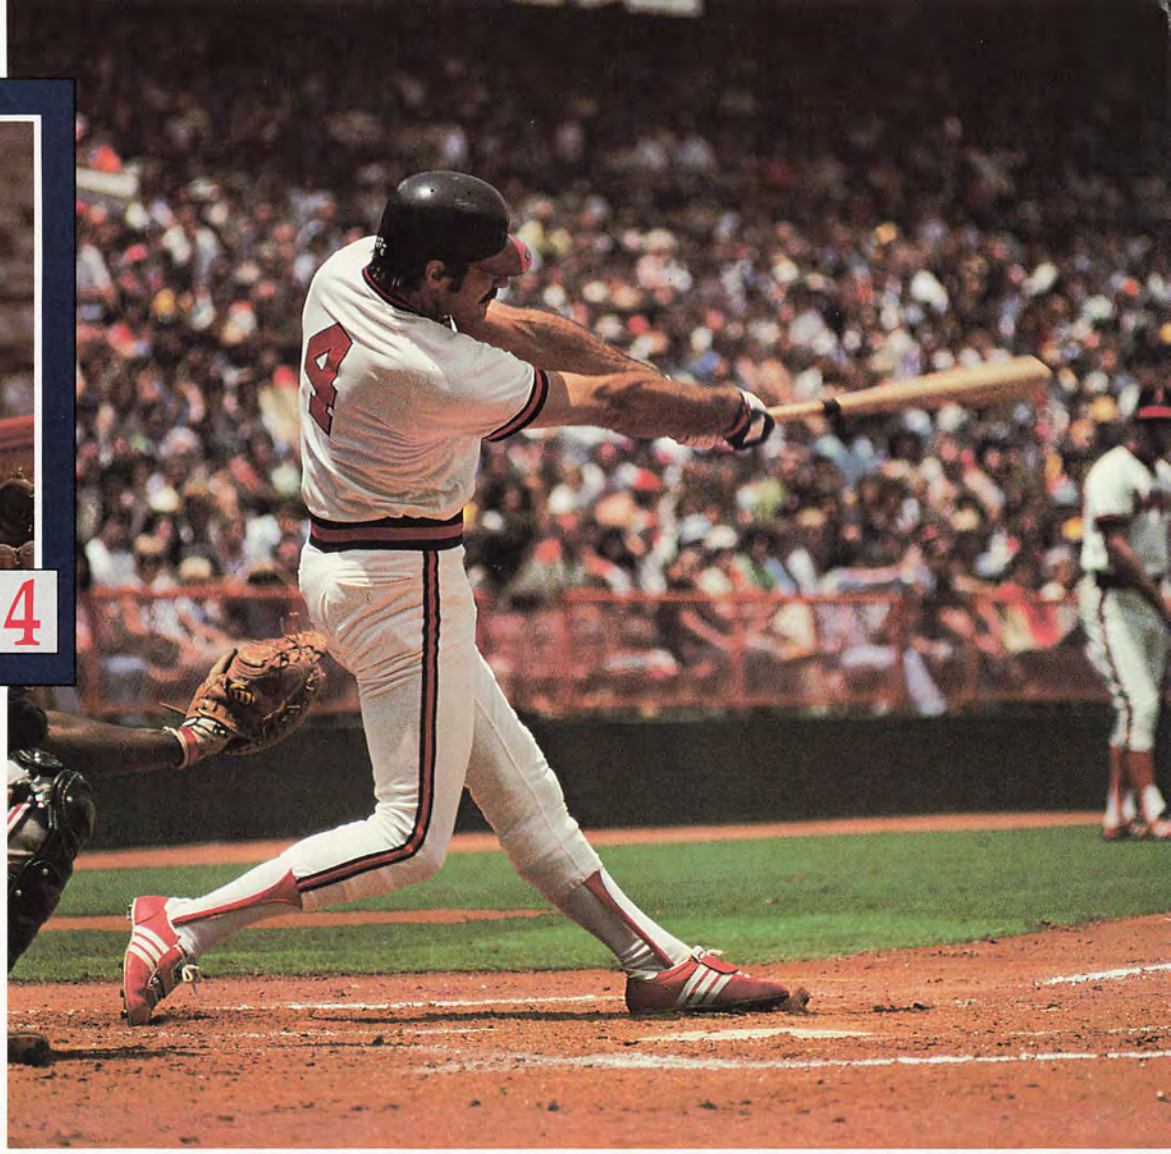

Doug DeCinces had another outstanding season for the Angels in 1983. He put together a 14-game hitting streak from April 18 to May 8 and finished the year with a .495 slugging percentage. Although he missed 67 games during the season, he still ranked second on the club in RBI (65) and game-winning RBI (6). He was placed on the disabled list July 19 due to back spasms and didn't return until August 19. The Angels were only a half-game out of first place at the time of Doug's injury, but had slipped to nine back by his return. In 1982 Doug set career-highs in average (.301), games (153), at-bats (575), runs (94), hits (173), doubles (42), triples (5), home runs (30), and RBI (97).

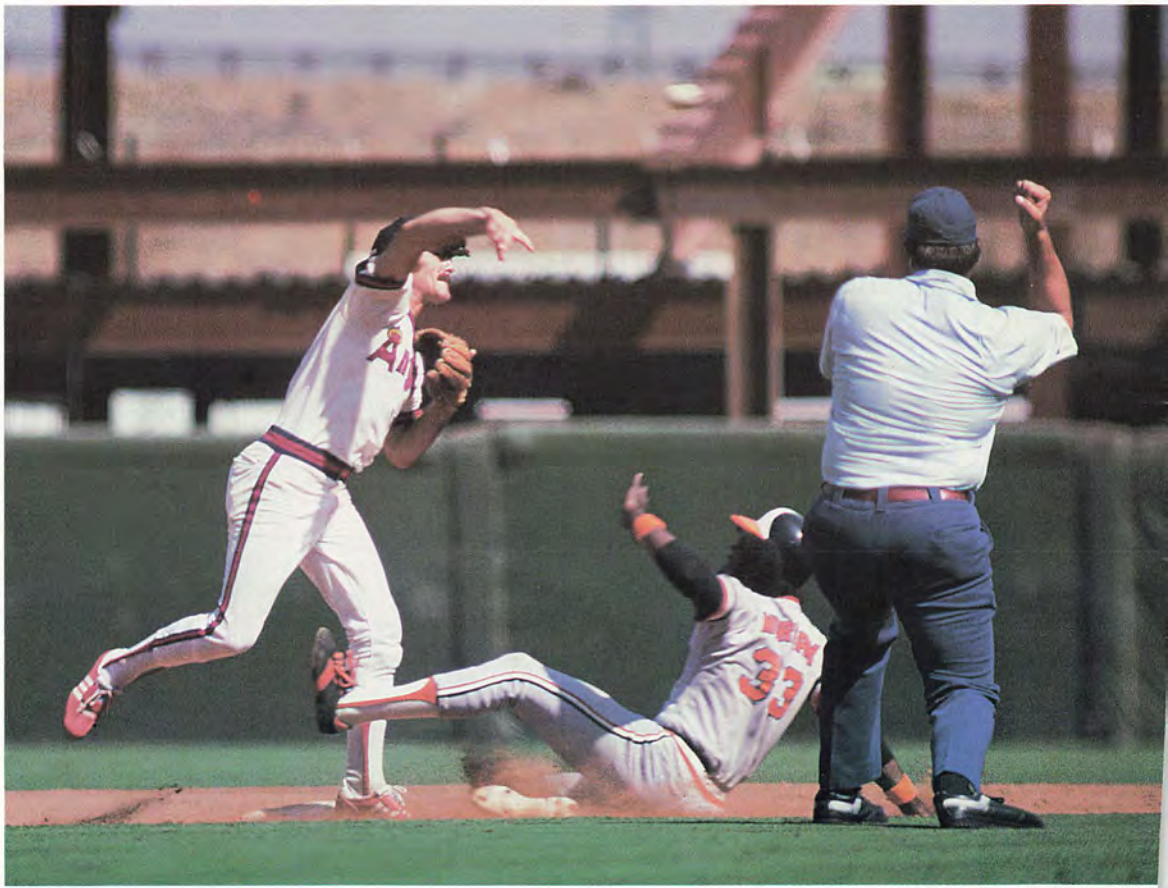

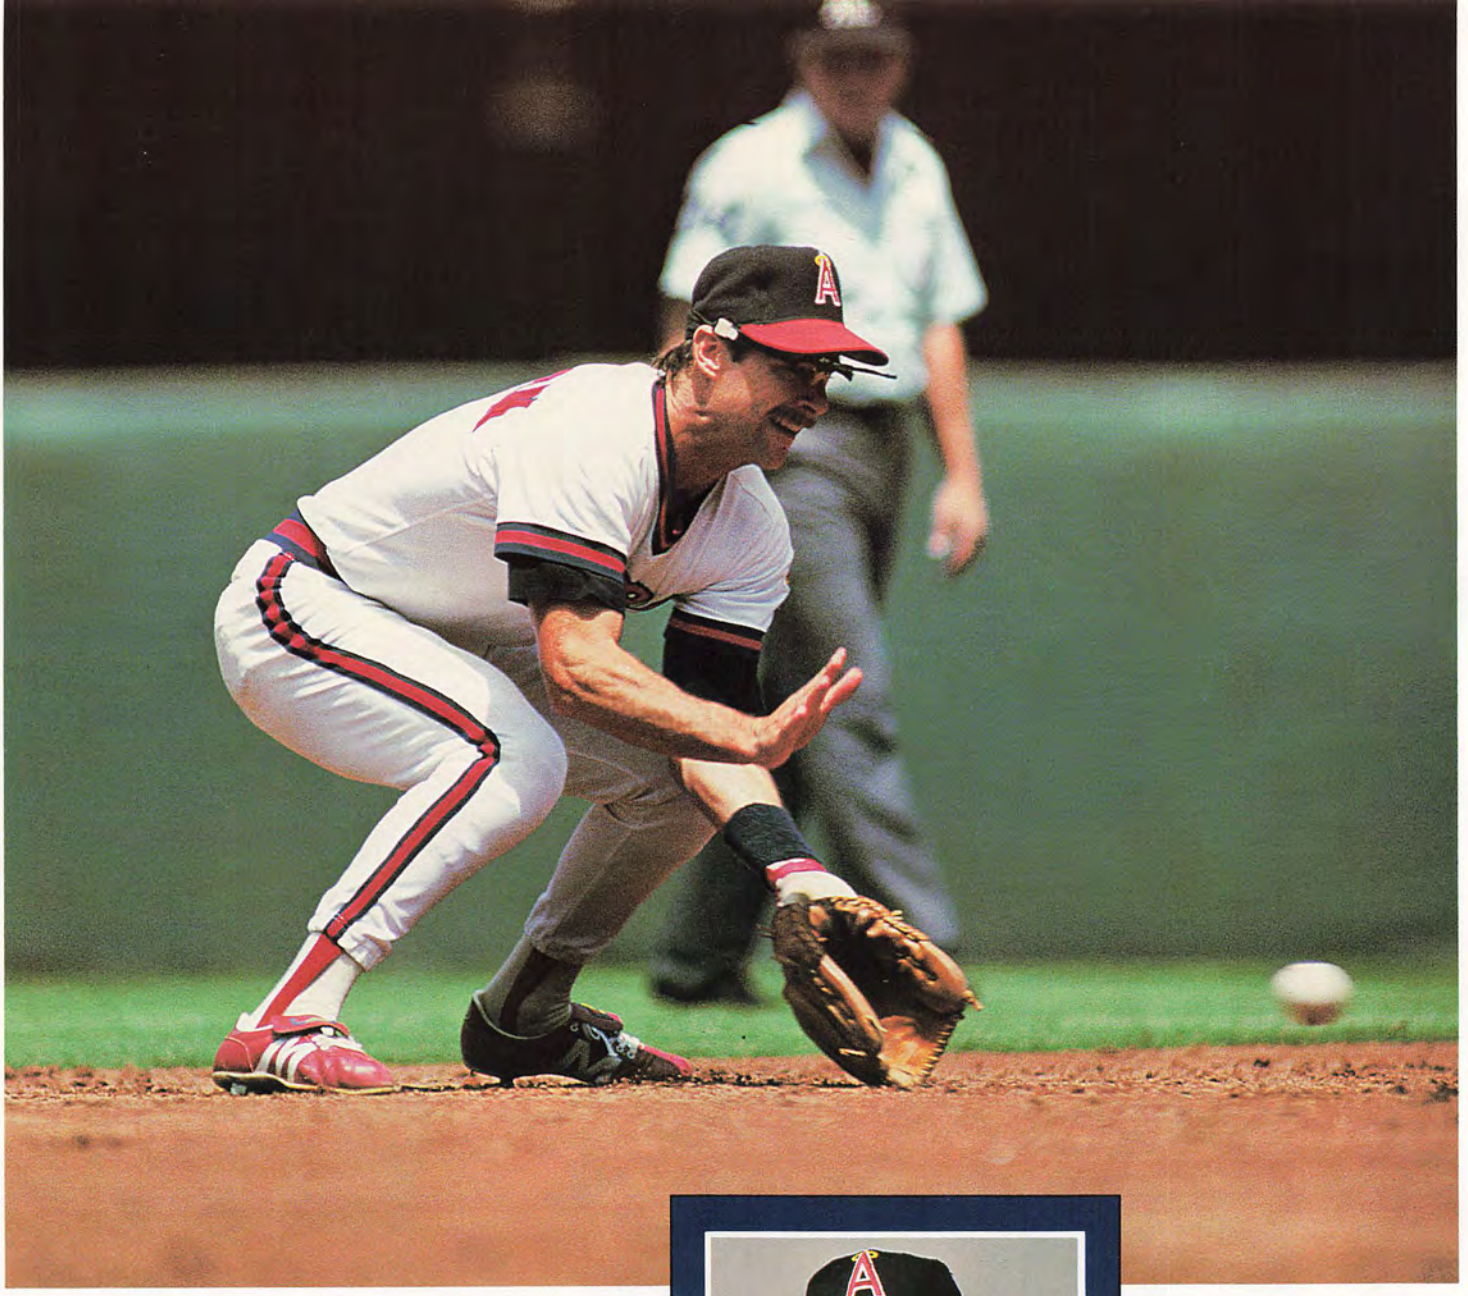

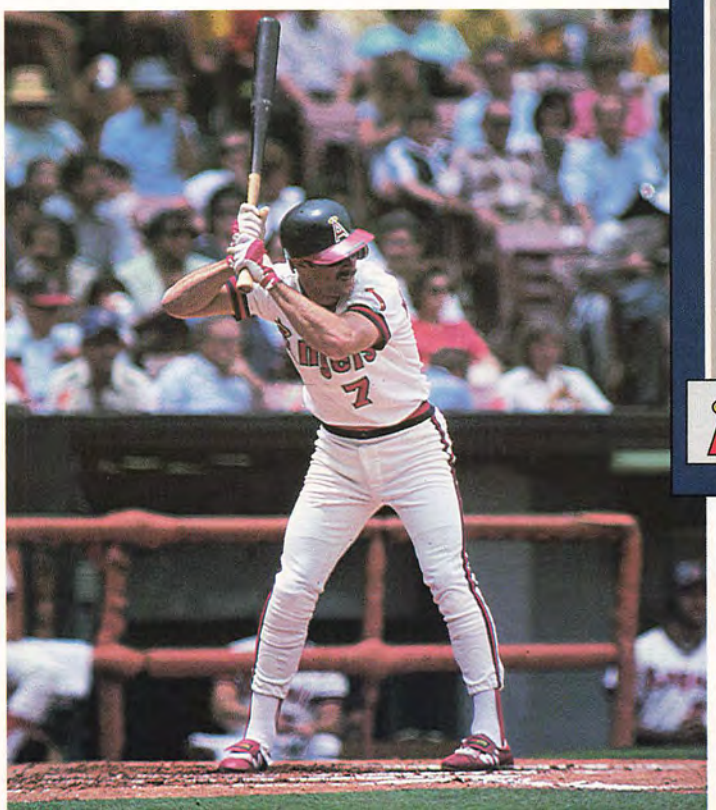

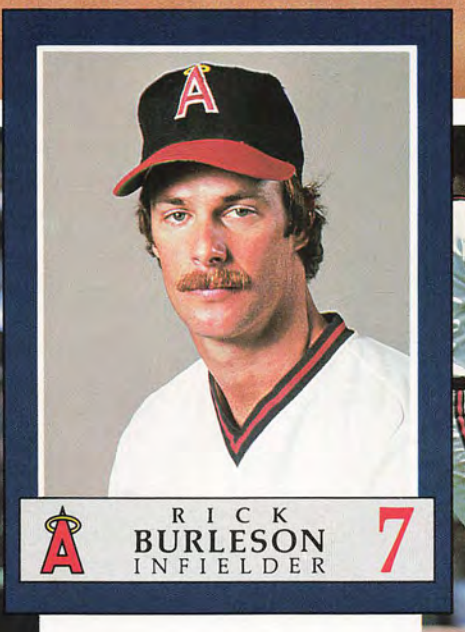

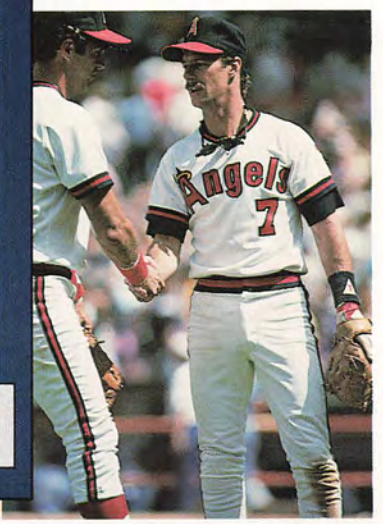

Though his season ended prematurely on August 28 due to a broken finger, Bobby Grich had another outstanding year in 1983. Hitting for a .292 average, the third highest of his career, Grich finished third on the club with 65 runs and 62 RBI. He also led the team in bases on balls (76) and reached base via hit or walk in 94 of his 120 games. Bobby came to the Angels via the 1976 re-entry draft. In 1981 he tied for the A.L. lead in home runs with 22 in hitting for a career-high .304 average. A six-time All-Star, Grich became the Angels' all-time leader in games played at second base last season (804). The Sporting News Minor League Player of the Year in 1971, Bobby also received TSN's Silver Slugger Award in 1981 and has won four Gold Gloves over his career.

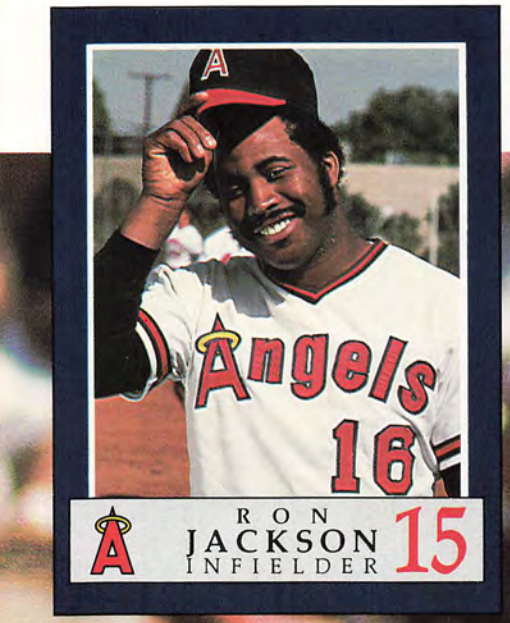

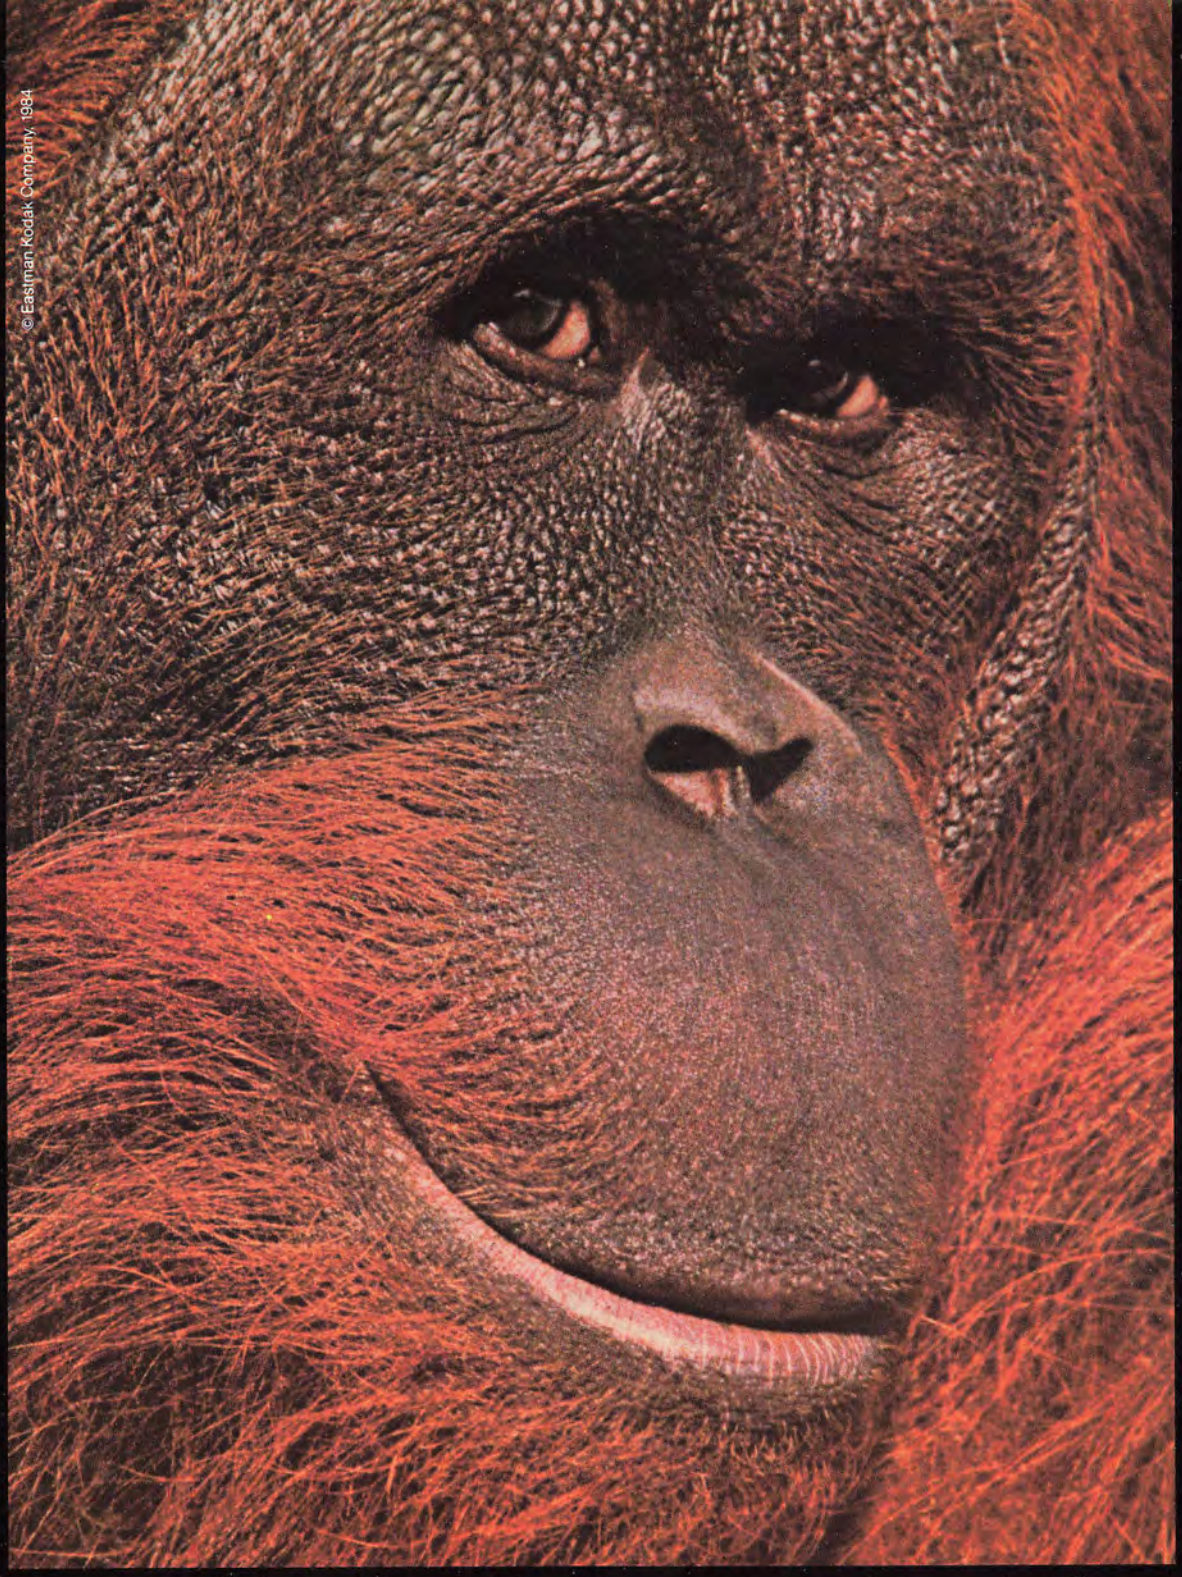

Rick Burleson has been on the comeback trail since injuring his shoulder in April of 1982. He was assigned briefly to Edmonton on June 10 last season for injury rehabilitation and was reactivated from the disabled list June 30. He came back strong going 2-5 against Texas on June 30 to begin a string of seven straight multiple-hit games. Defensively, he finished with a .969 fielding percentage in 31 games. Rick made his major league debut with Boston in 1974 and came to the Angels in a 1980 trade.

Ron Jackson filled a utility role for the Angels in 1983. On August 5 the versatile Jackson played first, third, and the outfield. He was used as both a designated hitter and pinch hitter during the season and put together a nine-game hitting streak from July 26 to August 3. Ron collected eight home runs, his highest total since 1979. In 1982, the Angels' pennant-winning year, Jackson hit .331 in 53 games for California.

Daryl Sconiers tied a club record in 1983, his rookie season, hitting a pair of grand slam home runs. His first came against Detroit on April 27 in Anaheim and his second on May 28 against Cleveland. Sconiers was used as a designated hitter (.309), pinch-hitter (.286) and at first base. Sconiers had four game-winning RBI during 1983.

Infielder Dick Schofield continued his impressive play for Edmonton last season, hitting .284 with 16 home runs and 94 RBI. The 21-year-old finished the season with a .461 slugging percentage and a .374 on-base mark. The Angels purchased his contract on September 8 and Dick made his major league debut against Chicago the same day at shortstop. He collected 11 hits during September, five of which went for extra bases. He also had a four-game hitting streak from September 20-23 and hit in six of seven from September 20-27 (.381, 21-8).

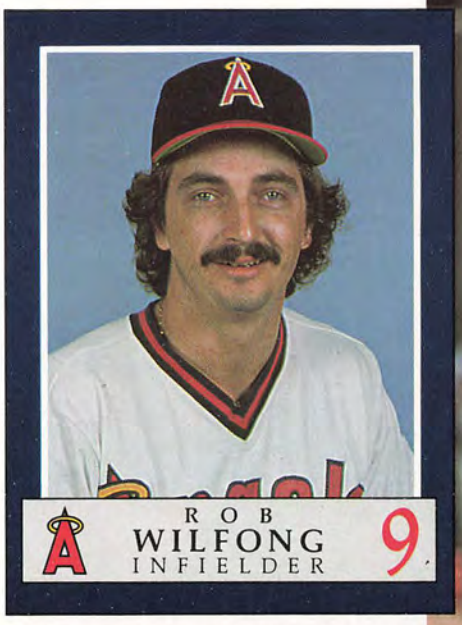

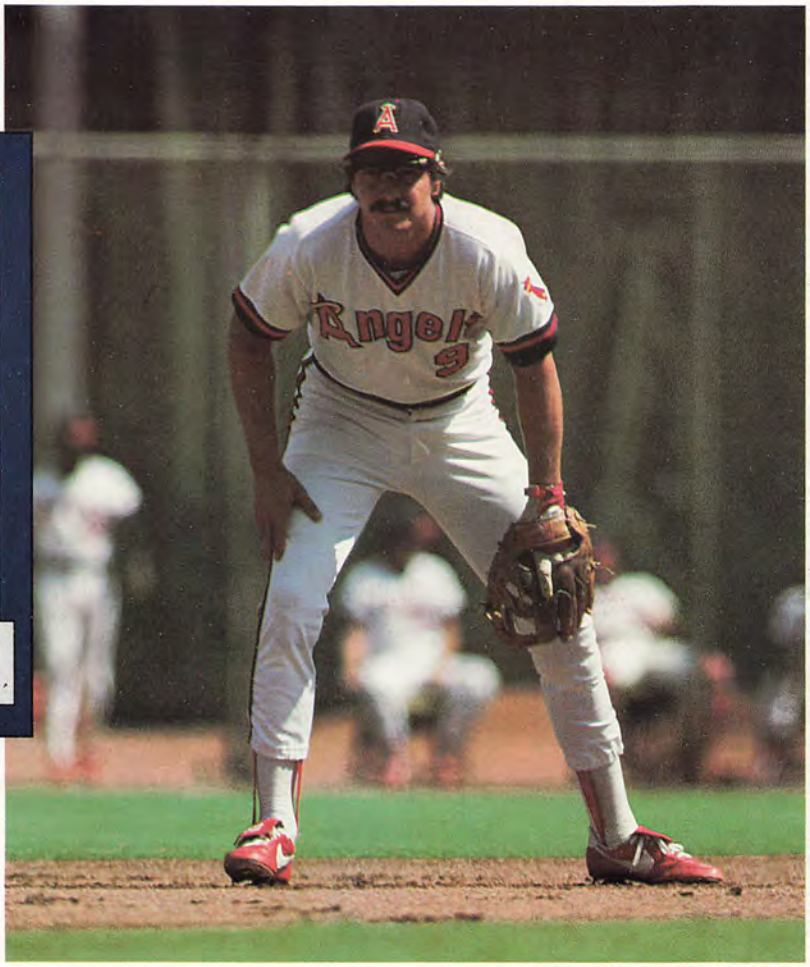

Infielder Rob Picciolo spent the 1983 season with Milwaukee though saw action in only 14 games due to the Brewers steady infield line-up. Despite limited playing time, Picciolo played each of the infield positions and handled a total 48 chances with only one error. He also appeared as a designated hitter for the Brewers. Picciolo was signed as a free-agent by the Angels on February 6 of this year.

Rob Wilfong continued his role as utility man for the Angels in 1983, playing every infield position with the exception of shortstop and serving as both a pinch-hitter and designated hitter. Wilfong collected 12 multiple hit games and had three game-winning RBI. The 30-year-old infielder had six hits in nine at-bats from July 21-25 and hit in six of seven (.416, 24-10) from August 30 to September 7. Wilfong compiled a .995 fielding percentage at second base, committing only one error in 203 total chances.

Despite an off-year in 1983, Reggie Jackson reached several career milestones. He hit his 476th home run to pass Stan Musial and Willie Stargell for 14th place on the all-time list. On June 5th his homer off Milwaukee's Moose Haas gave him his 900th lifetime extra-base hit. Jackson also had a streak of four consecutive games in which he hit home runs April 14-18. Over his long career Jackson has earned the nickname "Mr. October" having appeared in 71 post-season games. In 1973 he was named American League MVP and led the league in runs scored (99), home runs (32), RBI (117) and game-winning hits (18). He also hit .310 as the A's defeated the Mets for the World Series and was named World Series MVP as well as The Sporting News Player of the Year. Jackson was named to his 13th All-Star Team in 1983 but was replaced due to a rib injury he suffered on June 21. The 37-year-old outfielder has averaged 30 home runs and 90 RBI for each of his 16 major league seasons.

Brian Downing established an American League record for most consecutive errorless games (244) in 1983. Despite missing 49 games, Brian led the club in runs scored (68) and was second in home runs (19) and bases on balls (62). He finished the season with a .429 slugging percentage and a .353 on-base mark. Downing made his major league debut in 1973 with the Chicago White Sox. He joined the Angels in 1977 and had his best season with the club in 1979, hitting .326 as one of six Angels to total 75-or-more RBI.

HERE'S TO THE RIGHT STUFF AND THOSE WHO HAVE IT.

Before Chuck Yeager turned 22, he showed the world what he was made of by shooting down thirteen enemy planes in World War II.

Five in one day.

But it wasn't until after the war, when still only 24, that Yeager began to tackle an even more dangerous adversary: the untested limits of space.

He went on to become the first man to break the sound barrier, the first to travel at more than twice that speed (over 1600 mph) and one of the first pilots to reach the edge of space, taking a plane above 100,000 feet.

If there's ever been anyone who had "the right stuff", it's Chuck Yeager.

Especially when it comes to the Scotch he drinks: Cutty Sark.

Injuries slowed outfielder Ellis Valentine in 1983. He was placed on the 21-day disabled list on March 30 and assigned for injury rehabilitation to Edmonton on May 2. He was recalled on May 6 and collected his first A.L. hit and home run on May 9 at Boston. After being struck by a foul ball during batting practice on June 8, Valentine did not play again until June 22. He hit .357 (28-10) with three home runs, eight RBI and eight runs scored from June 27 to July 4.

Veteran outfielder Fred Lynn was slowed somewhat by injuries in 1983, but still finished second on the club in multiple hit games. Lynn had 17 multiple-RBI games, including three, four-RBI performances. He collected 22 home runs, 14 of which either tied or put the club ahead. Lynn finished the season with a .483 slugging percentage and a .356 on-base mark. His .933 fielding percentage in 113 games ranked him second in the league and had only two errors in 284 total chances. Lynn, who had the best season of his career in 1979 with the Red Sox, came to California in a 1981 trade. The four-time Gold Glove award winner has appeared in nine All-Star Games. In last year's game Lynn hit the first grand slam in All-Star history to lead the A.L. to a 13-3 win.

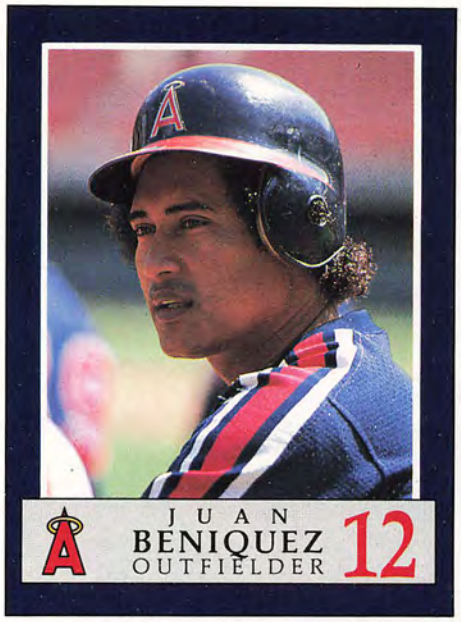

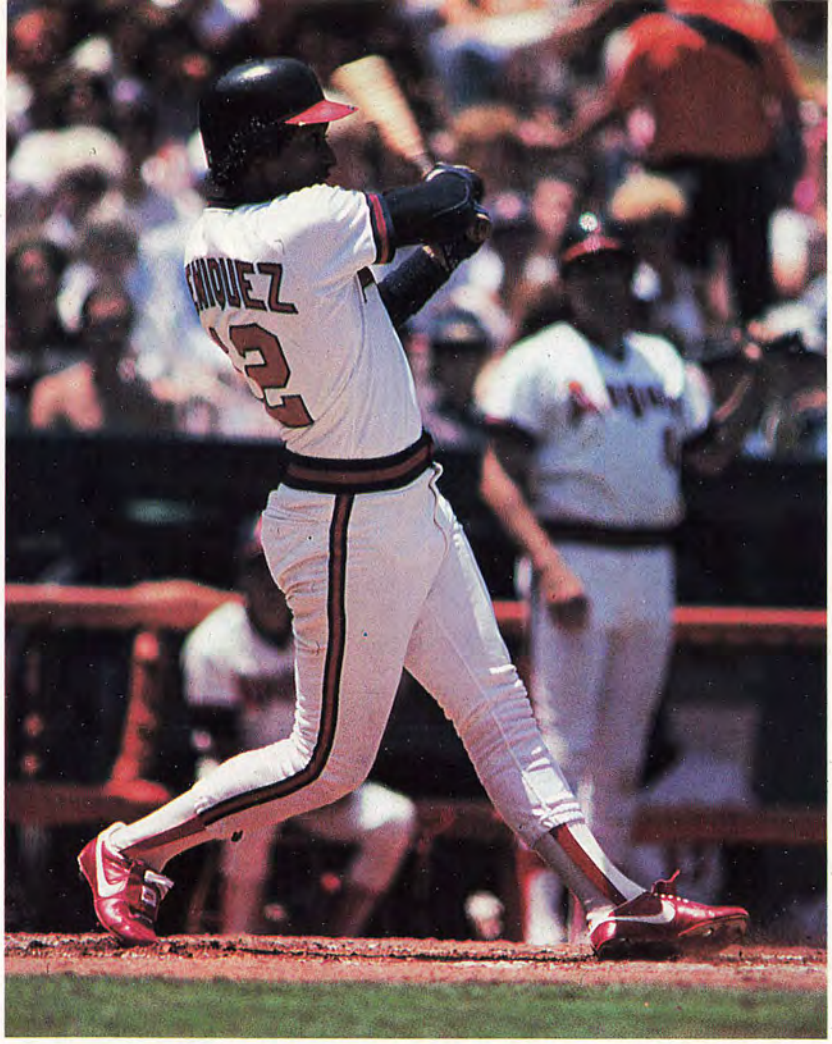

Switch-hitter Gary Pettis was recalled from Edmonton on September 8 of last season and hit .294 in 22 games for the Angels. He led the Angels with eight stolen bases in 11 attempts and finished the season with an 11-game hitting streak, .362 (47-17). In the PCL Pettis led the league in runs scored (138) and stolen bases (52 in 58 attempts). The speedy outfielder has averaged 45 stolen bases per year over each of his five seasons.

Despite missing nearly two months of the season with a fractured finger, Juan Beniquez experienced the finest season of his major league career in 1983. He hit for a career-high .305 in 92 games and collected five game-winning RBI. Juan put together a 13-game hitting streak from April 23 to May 10. Upon returning from his injury on August 9 he hit at a .351 clip. Originally signed by Boston as a free agent in 1968, Juan was traded to the Texas Rangers in 1975. He was acquired by the Angels in the 1980 re-entry draft.

CATCHERS

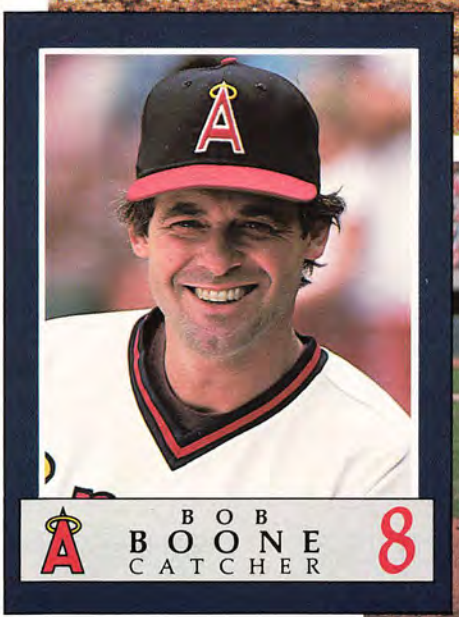

Catcher Jerry Narron collected 27 home runs and 101 RBI for Edmonton last season and the Angels purchased his contract on September 8. He appeared in 10 games for California as a pinch hitter, designated hitter, and catcher. The 28-year-old Narron hit a game-winning home run against the Rangers on October 1 to give the Angels a 6-5 win. This year he'll serve as back-up to veteran catcher Bob Boone.

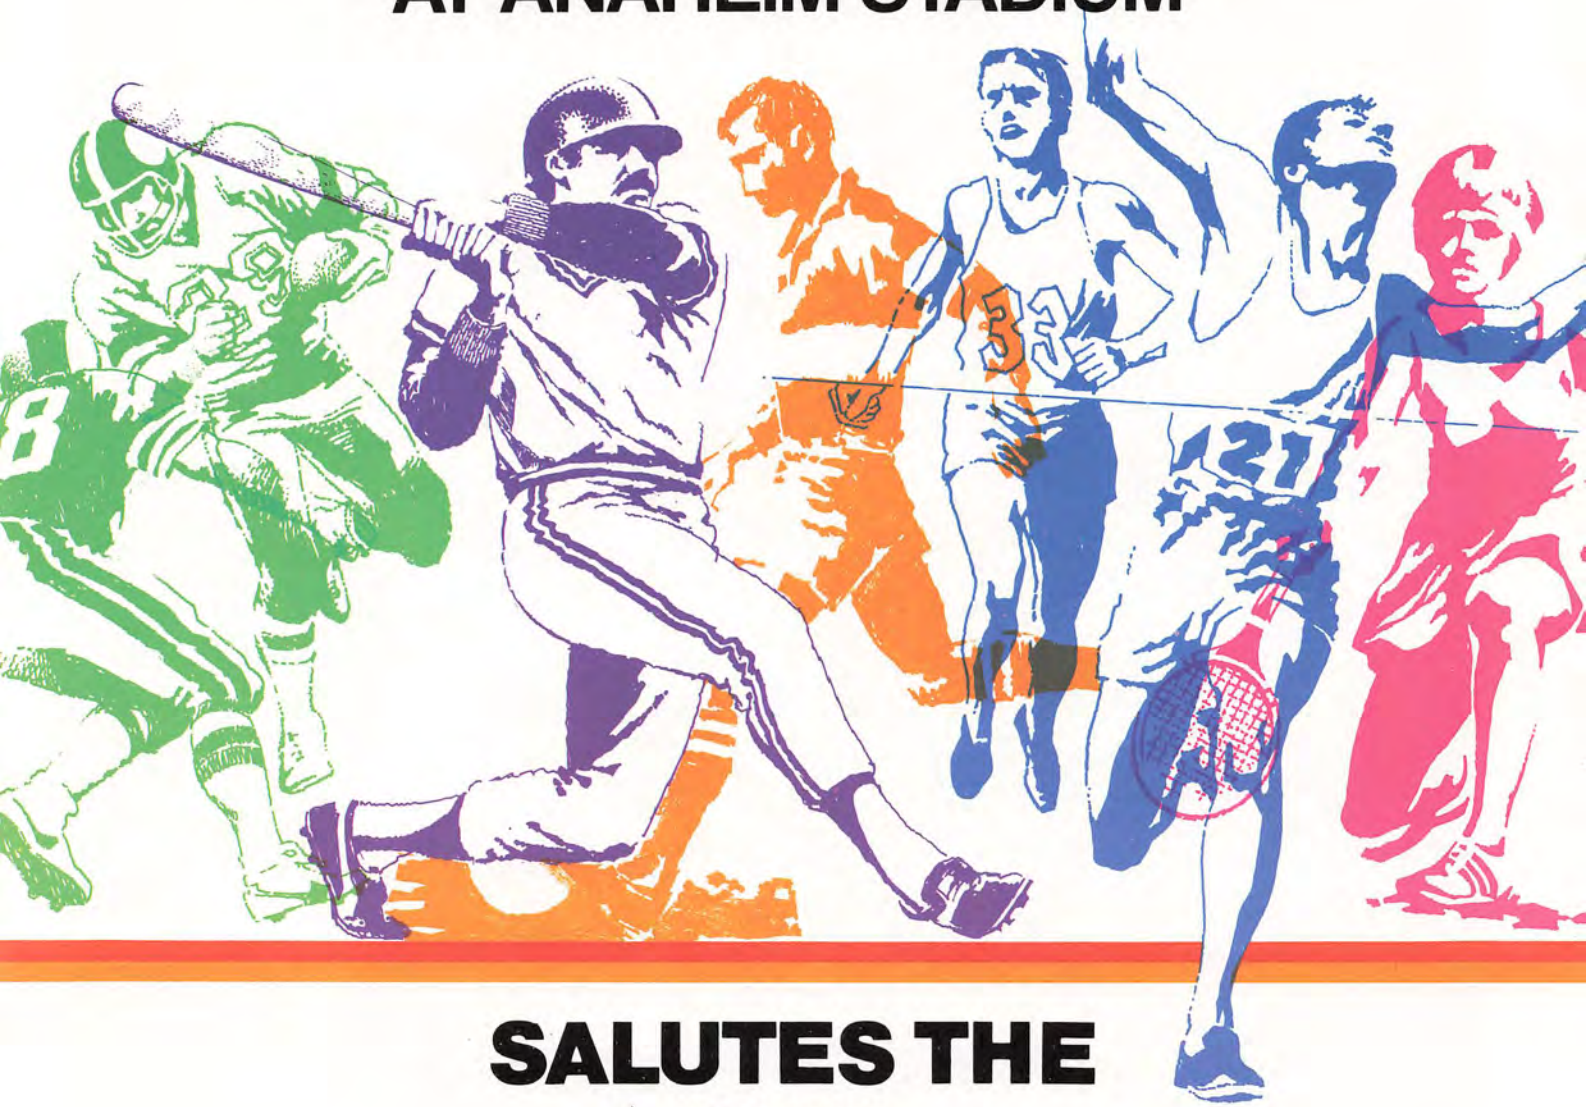

Bob Boone became the first catcher in Angels' history to win the "Owner's Trophy Award" as the team's Most Valuable Player in 1983. Bob had 30 multiple-hit games and 14 multiple-RBI games over the course of the 1983 season. He led American League catchers in games played, assists (83), double plays (12), and was third in putouts (606) and total chances (703). Boone has won three Gold Glove awards in his career and has also been named to four All-Star teams. After graduating from Stanford in 1969, Boone was selected by Philadelphia in that year's free agent draft. He was acquired by the Angels in December of 1981.

PITCHERS

1983 was a season of rehabilitation for veteran reliever Don Aase. Following elbow surgery in October of 1982, Aase didn't pick up a baseball again until last July. Since then he's been working on gradually strengthening his arm in preparation for 1984. Aase made his last appearance for the Angels on July 17, 1982 at Cleveland. After moving to the bullpen in August of 1980, Aase has responded with a 10-7 mark (17 saves and 2.60 ERA). A sixth-round selection by the Red Sox in the June, 1972 draft, Aase came to the Angels in a 1977 trade with Boston.

Lefthander Tommy John led the Angels pitching staff in starts (34) and innings pitched (234.2) in 1983. He finished in a three-way tie with Ken Forsch and Bruce Kison for most victories (11) marking the 16th time in his career that he's recorded victories in double figures. John was 8-6 at Anaheim Stadium with a 2.64 ERA, but went 3-7 on the road. One of only eight pitchers to win 20-or-more games in both leagues, John was 20-7 for the Dodgers in 1977 and had two 20-plus seasons with the Yankees in 1979 and 1980. He came to the Angels in a 1982 trade with New York and has a 15-15 mark with California. A member of four All-Star teams, John is 6-3 in post-season play including a 2-1 World Series mark. He also earned Comeback Player of the Year in 1976 following his return from elbow reconstruction surgery.

For the sixth consecutive season, righthander Ken Forsch recorded victories in double figures. He began the season by winning his first three starts and finished the year with an 11-12 mark. The 37-year-old pitcher had his best effort on July 19 with a three-hit, 6-1 victory against Boston. He also had a six-hit, 3-0 shutout of Milwaukee on June 3. In 1981, his first season with California, Forsch topped the club with 11 wins and a 2.88 ERA. He was equally impressive in 1982, setting career-highs in wins (13), and innings pitched (228). While a member of the Houston Astros Forsch pitched a 6-0 no-hitter against Atlanta on Opening Day, April 7, 1979 and joined his brother Bob of St. Louis as the first brother combo to pitch major league no-hitters.

Despite experiencing pain from a back problem, righthander Bruce Kison led the Angels in strikeouts with 83 and tied for the lead in wins with 11. He was 8-2 on the road with a 3.41 ERA, second lowest on the staff. Kison started the season winning six of his first eleven decisions and was 4-0 with a 1.52 ERA in May. He was placed on the 21-day disabled list May 30 due to lower back spasms and stiffness. Re-activated on June 27, Kison pitched seven shutout innings in a 8-0 win over Texas. He moved to the bullpen after losing four of his next six starts and collected two wins and two saves in his first four games as a reliever. Kison made his major league debut with Pittsburgh in 1971 and was selected by the Angels in the 1979 re-entry draft.

No room for compromise.

Refusing to compromise costs us more. And it takes us more time. Because it means we brew Bud Light® with only costly natural ingredients, while most other light beers use artificial ingredients. And it means we age our less-filling light beer 10 days longer than most light beers.

It is the same way we've been brewing beer for more than 100 years. And we know it's the right way.

That's why Bud Light has a taste you will not find in any other light beer.

Righthander Jim Slaton will make his Angels debut in 1984. He spent the 1983 season with Milwaukee and was their winningest pitcher with a 14-6 mark. He had five saves and a 4.33 ERA in 46 relief appearances for the Brewers. Slaton, who came to the Angels in a December trade, has compiled a 62-40 record during the last six seasons. When he left Milwaukee he was the team's all-time pitching leader in games, innings pitched, starts, victories, strikeouts, and shutouts. He's worked out of the bullpen for the past four years, primarily as a middleman, and in 1982 saved Game Four of the A.L. Championship Series versus the Angels and won Game Four of the World Series against St. Louis.

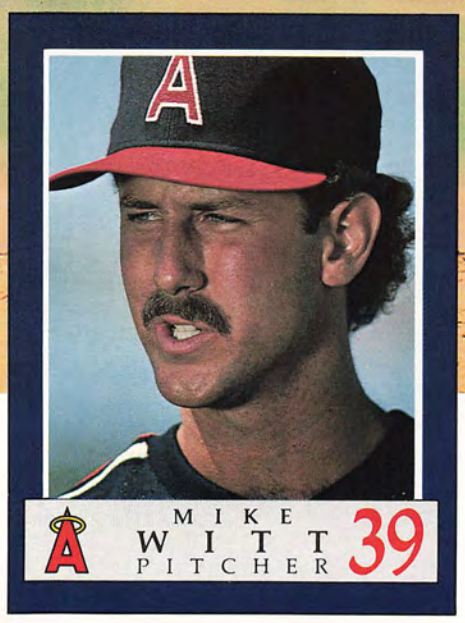

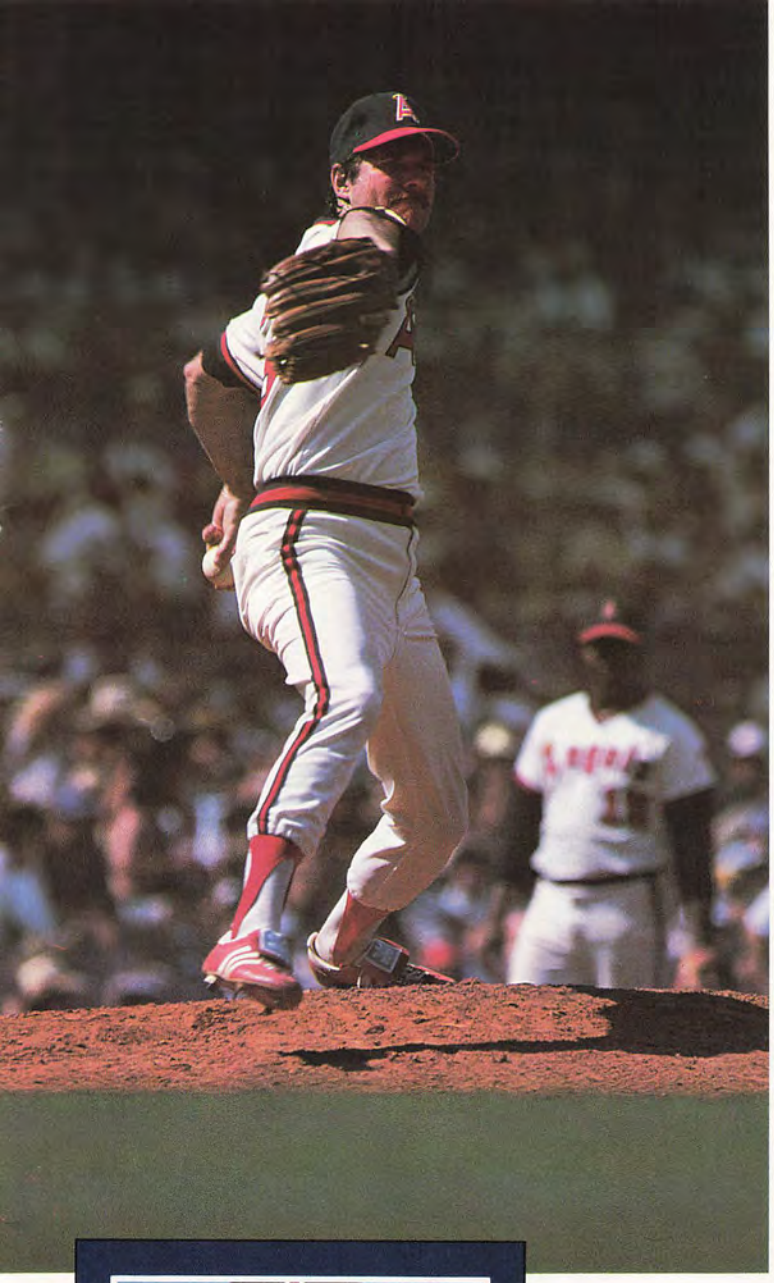

In his first full major league season righthander Luis Sanchez became the Angels' number one reliever. He led the team in appearances with 56 and also collected seven saves. Sanchez was 6-2 with two saves in his first 17 outings. He had his best efforts of the season on the road with a 7-1 record, four saves, and a 1.99 ERA. He made his first major league start on September 13 versus Kansas City.

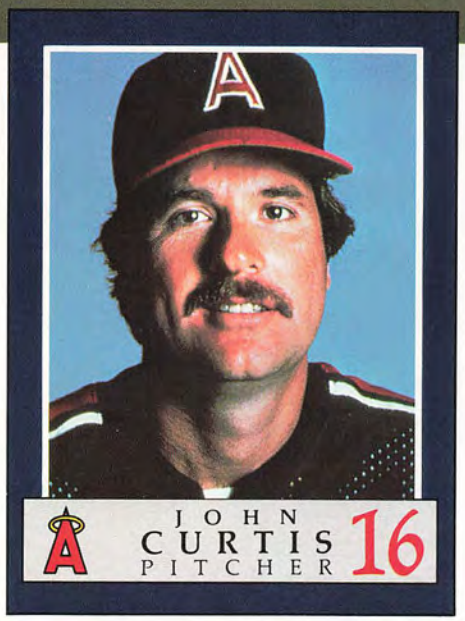

Veteran lefthander Geoff Zahn recorded his lowest ERA (3.33) since recording 3.04 with the Twins in 1978. He led the Angels in shutouts (3) for the second straight season and tied for the lead in complete games with 11. His ERA was best among the Angels starters and his 3-1 April record boosted his career mark to 21-4 for the month. Acquired by the Angels in the 1980 re-entry draft, Zahn has a 37-30 mark with California and a 3.78 ERA.

Despite setting a career-high for most appearances (43), righthander Mike Witt had a disappointing season in 1983. After losing his first three starts he moved to the bullpen on April 22. He returned to the rotation on July 21 and split his next six decisions, but wound up his campaign with five losses. Witt, the club's "Rookie of the Year" in 1981 made his major league debut with less than 70 professional games experience. He registered his first victory in his first complete game—a two-hit, 7-1 win at Minnesota on April 26, 1981.

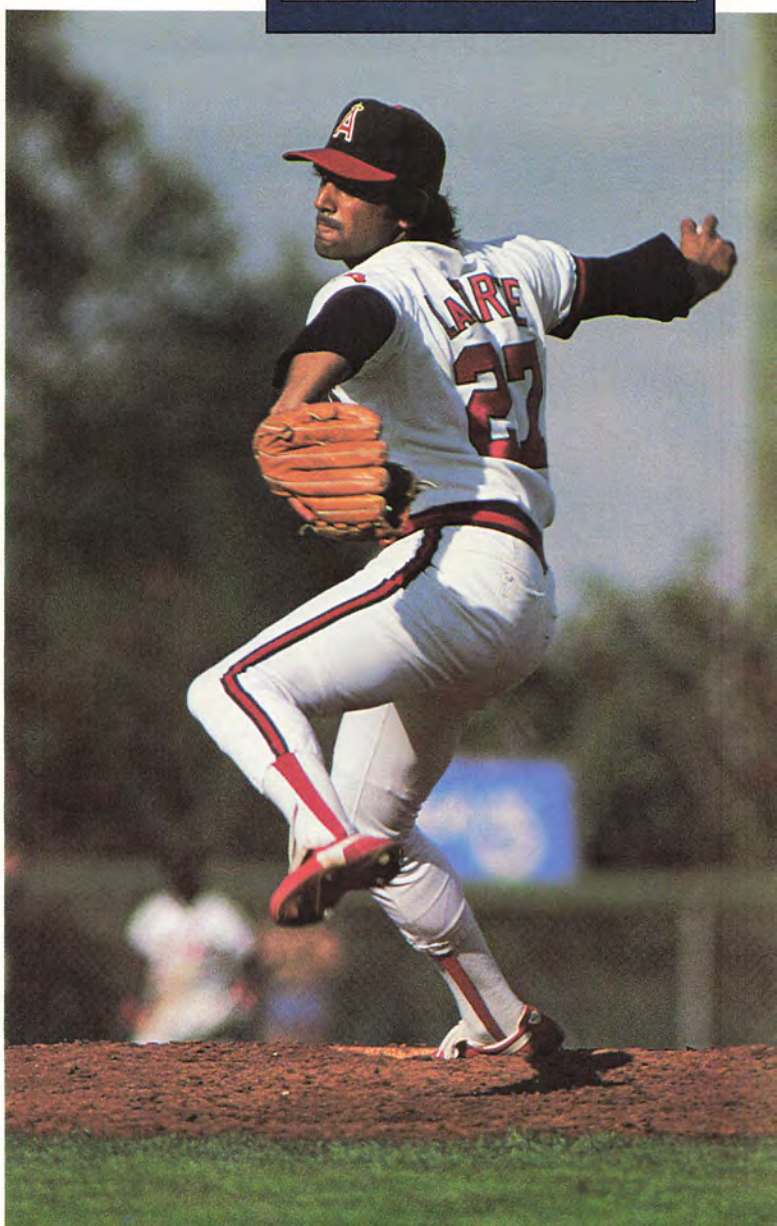

John Curtis made appearances as both a reliever and a starter for the Angels last season. He was 1-1 with a 3.76 ERA as a reliever (69.1 IP – 29 ER) and 0-1 with a 3.92 ERA as a starter (20.2 IP – 9 ER). John made his major league pitching debut in 1970 with the Boston Red Sox. Curtis played for the Cardinals, Giants, and Padres before coming to the Angels by way of San Diego in 1982.

Righthander Frank LaCorte has spent the last four seasons in a relief role for the Houston Astros. The 32-year-old LaCorte, who was selected by the Angels in the 1983 re-entry draft, has recorded a 17-16 mark with 26 saves as a reliever. He appeared in 37 games and registered a 4-4 mark with the Astros last season. In 1980 LaCorte was 5-0 with a 0.90 ERA at the All-Star break, but failed to make the N.L. squad. He finished that season with a career-low 2.82 ERA and career-highs in games (55) and saves (11).

Newcomer Ron Romanick spent the 1983 season in the Eastern League where he tied for first with 27 games started. The 23-year-old righthander tossed a pair of two-hitters, gaining 1-0 victories in both. Romanick was selected by the Angels in the first-round in the secondary phase of the January, 1981 free agent draft. He made an impressive debut that season, leading the California League in ERA (2.91), strikeouts (178), and innings pitched (207) with a 15-10 record.

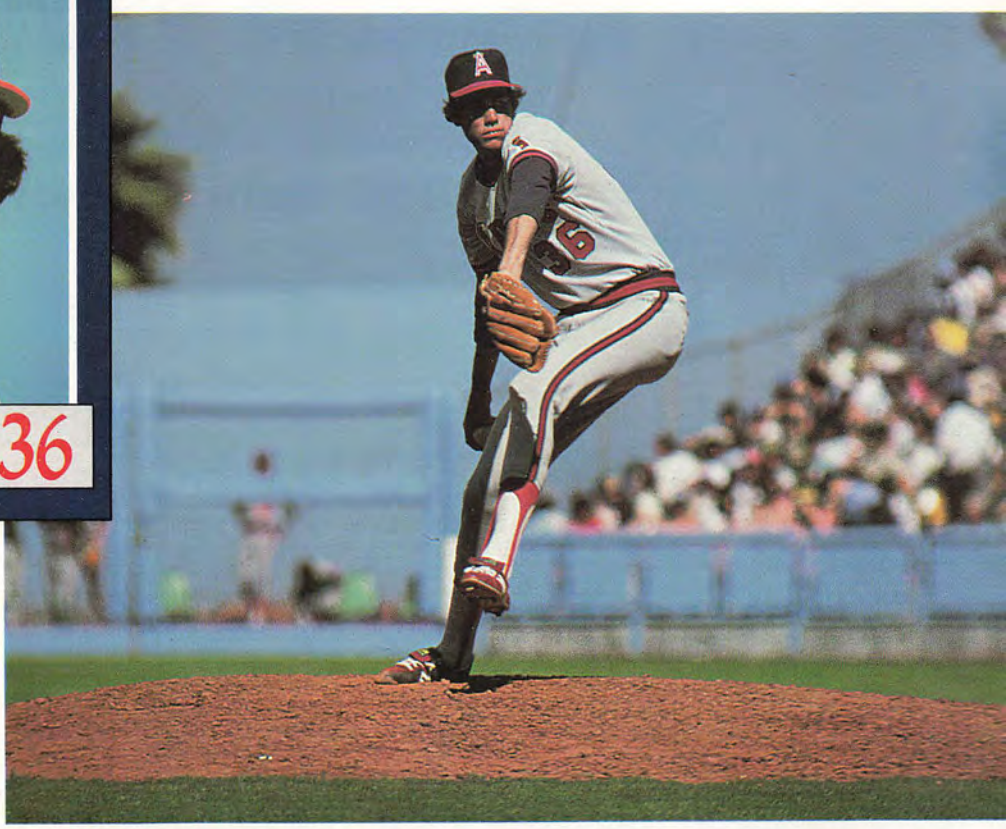

Righthander Curt Kaufman was acquired by the Angels in a trade which sent Tim Foli to the Yankees last December. The 26-year-old Kaufman was selected to the International League All-Star team for the second straight season in 1983. He recorded a 2.75 ERA in 78.2 innings and compiled 25 saves (tops in the league). In his five minor league seasons Kaufman has registered a 36-15 mark with 64 saves and a 2.71 ERA.

Righthander Steve Brown started the 1983 season with Edmonton where he recorded a 10-4 mark. He was recalled on July 23 and made his major league debut on August 1 as the starter in a 7-0 loss to Minnesota. He gained his first major league win on August 27 versus the Yankees, pitching 2.1 innings of scoreless relief. He registered a 1.80 ERA in his final three games (25 IP – 5 ER) with two complete games including a 2-0 shutout against Texas on October 2.

Angels Attendance Leads the League

Attendance and the Angels have become synonymous. In 1982 California attracted an all-time American League record attendance of 2,807,360 and last season the Angels again led the league with 2,555,016 fans passing through the turnstiles. Over the past two seasons alone more than 9.5 million fans have watched the Angels at home and on the road. The Angels also attracted the two top crowds in the club's history in 1983. On July 4, 63,132 watched the Angels take on Kansas City and on April 23, 63,073 were on hand as the Angels played Baltimore.
