Jubliant teammates carried Series hero Ralph Terry off the field at Candlestick Park last October 16th after pitching the Yankees to a thrilling 1-0 triumph in the seventh and deciding game of the 1962 World Series against the San Francisco Giants.

the new york yankees

Just 60 years ago, Manager Clark Griffith led the first New York Yankee team (then known as the Highlanders) to a fourth place finish in their first season in the fledgling American League. And just 40 years ago this spring Yankee Stadium was dedicated as Manager Miller Huggins directed his league champion Yankees to their first World Series triumph.

In the intervening years, baseball history has been played at this most famous sports stadium in the world. More than 51 million fans have seen the Yanks in action in 40 seasons at the Stadium. The greatest stars in the game's history have performed here.

The Yankees of today are proud, indeed, of their heritage. Yankee teams of the 1960s have been worthy successors to the revered clubs of the 1920s, 30s, 40s and 50s. Twenty World Championships and 27 American League pennants are testimony to the saga of greatness that has been the mark of the New York Yankees. To their glorious past . . . to their promise of the future, the Yankees dedicate this 1963 Yearbook.

Yankee Stadium

Most Famous Sports Arena

Sixty years ago, the Yankees (then known as the Highlanders) entered the American League and just 40 years ago, April 18, 1923, this world famous stadium was first opened with a huge announced throng of 74,217, while an estimated 15,000 were turned away.

And, as the late W. O. McGeehan pointed out in his New York Herald story (part of which appears with box score of that first game, below), the dramatic moment of that inaugural came in the third inning when the great Babe Ruth appropriately hit the first Yankee Stadium home run, with two men on, to win the game for the Yanks, 4-1.

Since that first spring day in 1923, more than 51,000,000 fans have poured through the Yankee Stadium turnstiles for American League ball games alone. Millions more have seen World Series games and many other sports events at the famous Stadium in the Bronx. And in 1923, the Yankees won the first of 20 World Championships and the third of the Bombers' 27 American League pennants. Sports history continues to be made at this famous sports arena . . . Yankee Stadium!

By W. O. McGEEHAN.

The New York Yankees opened their season yesterday in the new stadium on the Bronx side of the Harlem River with 74,217 customers by official count on hand. According to Col. Jacob Ruppert, president of the club, about 15,000 more were turned away. If baseball, as one magnate has maintained, is still in its infancy it must be quite a husky child.

Big events trigger news stories so it was not a surprise that Roger Maris, Ralph Terry and Tom Tresh in above photos made news in 1962 . . . Top photo (above) shows President Kennedy autographing a baseball for the game's home run king. This White House meeting took place last April on the Yankees' first trip to the Nation's Capitol. Maris was invited to the White House in his role as national co-chairman of the 1962 Multiple Sclerosis Campaign . . . In middle photo, Ralph Terry seems more proud of his bat which produced three hits on Sept. 1st than he was of winning his 20th game to become the first American League pitcher to reach that coveted mark. All-Star catcher Elston Howard looks on admiringly . . . Tom Tresh, who went on to win the American League "Rookie of the Year" honors, is seen grabbing an errant throw for a force at second base, in photo below. Tresh started the season at shortstop, moved to left field in August after Tony Kubek returned from service.

This Yearbook is filled with photos and stories of big events at Yankee Stadium. On this page are six photographs of significant happenings that helped make the Yankees big news again last season. In the three photos below are some of these events. Top photo shows a proud Mickey Mantle holding the numerals "400" representing the 400th major league home run Mickey hit on Sept. 10th. He now ranks seventh on the all-time homer parade. He had 404 as this season started . . . Mantle had made other — less happy news — earlier in the season when he fell heavily to the ground trying to beat out a hit on the last play of the game, May 18th. He suffered a severely pulled thigh muscle and bruised left knee in the accident and was out of the lineup for some five weeks. Note the grave concern of teammates . . . Lower photo shows the Alphagram on the center field scoreboard saluting Yogi Berra on the playing of his 2,000th game as a Yankee last June 9th. Only Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig have played more games in the Yankee pinstripe.

This was the play that gave the Yankees their 20th World Series victory last fall in as exciting a series as has been played in years. The classic was tied at three games apiece and there was no score when the Yankees loaded the bases with none out in the top half of the fifth. Tony Kubek slapped into a double play, scoring Moose Skowron with the run that made the difference.

The outstanding defensive play of the 1962 World Series was this spectacular catch by rookie Yankee left-fielder Tom Tresh in the seventh inning of the final game. Straining to the utmost, Tresh barely nabs Willie Mays' long drive into left. It was a "must" play for the Yankee cause, as Willie McCovey followed with a long triple to center and was stranded.

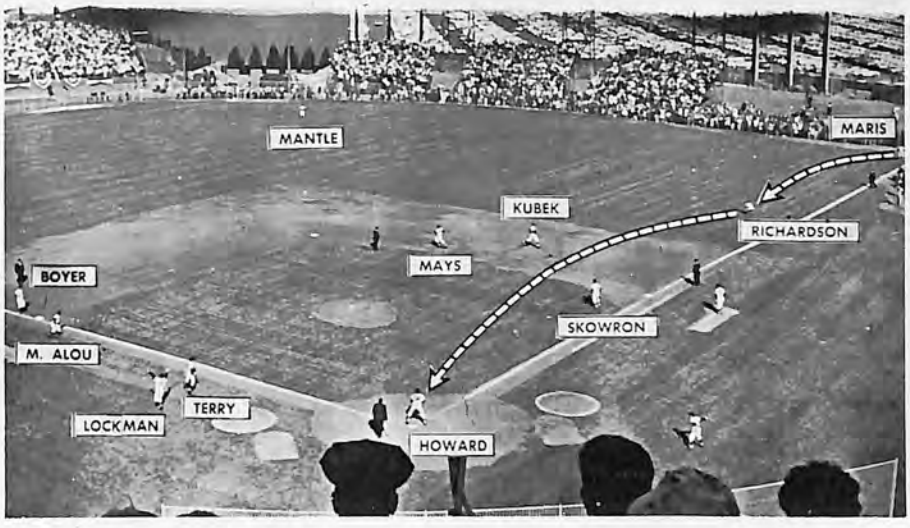

Bobby Richardson, no newcomer to World Series heroics, slides into first just ahead of pitcher Jack Sanford's belated throw to first baseman Willie McCovey. The Yankees won this fifth game by a 5-3 score.

Yankee and Giant players line up along their respective foul lines for the playing of the traditional National Anthem prior to the third game of the World Series (the first at Yankee Stadium).

Series Highlights

This was the big play of the ninth inning in the seventh and deciding game of the 1962 World Series. A series of tremendous defensive plays kept Ralph Terry's shutout intact and the Yankees won, 1-0. In this photo, Willie Mays had just slapped a long double into the right field corner and Roger Maris made a quick and accurate recovery, firing to "cutoff man" Bobby Richardson in short right field. Note third base coach holding up base runner Matty Alou. To a man, the Yankees say Alou would have been out at the plate had he gone in. On the next play, Richardson snared Willie McCovey's sizzling liner for the third out.

A happy, tired and grateful Ralph Terry smiles after his great 1-0 victory in the concluding World Series game. Photo was taken in the Candlestick Park visiting clubhouse just after Terry had won the Sport Magazine Corvette as the outstanding series performer. He also won the Baseball Writers' "Babe Ruth Award" for his series performances.

There were plenty of thrills for the capacity crowds and huge television and radio audiences in the 1962 World Series. But the weatherman also was a factor. A record three-day rain postponed activity in usually sunny San Francisco. Finally on Sunday, the two clubs motored to Modesto, Calif. for a much-needed workout. Although no announcement was made, thousands converged on the tiny, picturesque field as the dramatic photos at the left indicate. Above, hero Mickey Mantle signs his autograph for youngsters waiting at the Yankee bus in Modesto.

DEL E. WEBB

Yankee Co-Owners

The Yankee co-owners — Dan Topping and Del Webb — certainly have at least one thing in common. That is a dedication to the game of baseball in general, and, of course, to their Yankees, in particular. Both men are interested in the welfare and progress of our National Game, of the American League and certainly of the New York Yankees.

They bought the club immediately after World War II. In the ensuing years, the Yankees have captured 13 American League pennants and 10 World Championships, a record unmatched in the history of baseball.

Topping serves as the active executive head of the club, residing in New York. While Dan has many other interests including serving as a board member of several important corporations, his primary concern is the welfare of the New York Yankees. He sees most of the home games and spring training contests, and plays an active role in the direction of the team's operations. He comes by his sports interest honestly, having participated in his earlier years. He was an outstanding amateur golfer, played college baseball and later was co-owner of the old Brooklyn Football Dodgers and New York Yankees of the All-American Conference.

Del Webb was a frustrated baseball player. He was making excellent progress as a pitcher in pro ball when an arm injury forced his retirement from active competition. He turned to carpentry and from there to the construction business, building the Del E. Webb Corporation into one of the largest and most successful firms in its field. Despite an amazing schedule of activity that takes him from one corner of the nation to another almost daily, Del finds time to watch his Yankees and concern himself with the club's problems. He sees the club regularly in Los Angeles, as well as frequently in New York, at spring training and elsewhere during the season.

Both owners are dedicated to bringing Yankee fans the very best in baseball entertainment in the finest ball park in America.

Keeping the Yankees strong is the task which Yankee General Manager Roy Hamey has assumed. And, like Manager Ralph Houk, the proof is in the pudding after his first two years with a pair of pennants and World Championships. Strengthening the Yankee minor league operation also is the aim of Roy Hamey in a determined effort to keep top-flight talent coming to the big club . . . Roy has been in baseball 39 years and some 19 of these have been in the Yankee organization. He started in the game in 1925 as a minor league business manager, joined the Yanks nine years later working up through the farm system. Later he served as president of the American Association, general manager of both the Pittsburgh Pirates and Philadelphia Phillies and twice as assistant GM of the Bombers.

Yankee Management

Baseball fans have primary interest in the field personnel of a baseball team, but the basic success of any club starts at the top. Continuous strong management is vital to the success of any organization and certainly this is true of the Yankees. Under the Topping-Webb ownership, no club has had a better winning record nor attracted more fans. The Yankees are dedicated to continuing the policies that have made the Yankees the most exciting and greatest attraction in sports.

DANIEL R. TOPPING JR.

This is the first year that Dan Topping Jr. has served as assistant to the general manager. He has had excellent training for his new position, serving in several capacities at Yankee Stadium. Last year, he was the highly successful GM of the Ft. Lauderdale Yankees, helping his club win the Florida State League title.

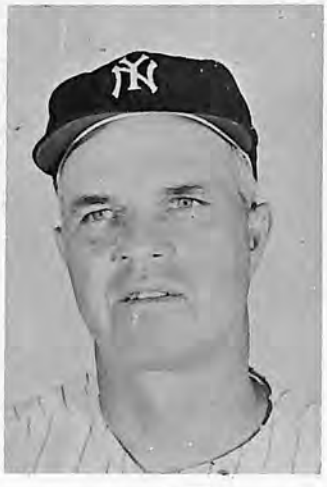

J. ARTHUR FRIEDLUND

A highly successful Chicago attorney Art Friedlund has served as secretary and general counsel of the Yankees since the start of the Topping-Webb regime. Director and counsel for many important firms in the country, he finds time to see and represent the Yankees throughout the championship season.

FRANK CROSETTI — Born Oct. 10, 1910 at San Francisco, Calif. Resides in Stockton, Calif. Married and father of two children . . . After 111 World Series games as a player and coach in 21 of the Yankees' record 27 classics, Frank Crosetti still has the enthusiasm of a young player. "Cro" has been third base coach since 1947 after playing shortstop for 17 years. Crosetti now is in his 32nd consecutive year as a Yankee.

JOHN SAIN — Born Sept. 25, 1917 at Havana, Ark. Resides in Walnut Ridge, Ark. Married and father of four children . . . Johnny is credited with an important contribution to the improvement of the Yankee pitching staff. This is his third season in that capacity. He was a standout pitcher for the Boston Braves, winning 20 games four times. Late in his career he was a relief ace for the Yankees.

JIM HEGAN — Born Aug. 3, 1920 at Lynn, Mass. Resides in Lakewood, Ohio. Married and father of three children. Jim's son, Mike, is an outstanding first base prospect in the Yankee farm system. Jim now is in his fourth season as Yankee catching and bullpen coach, after a distinguished career of 18 seasons behind the plate, most of them in Cleveland. He was in two Series with the Indians and twice played in the All-Star game.

YOGI BERRA — (See Page 25 for Berra biographical data.) It may seem a bit strange to read of Yogi Berra on the coaching page, but the indomitable Berra now serves as first base signalman along with his catching and pinch-hitting duties. After 17 seasons in the Yankee pinstripes, no one could be better qualified to handle the coaching reins than the popular Yogi.

Manager Ralph Houk received THE SPORTING NEWS award on the Red Barber TV show before an early season Yankee game last year. Houk won the honor from the "Bible of Baseball" for leading the Yankees to a World's Championship in his first year as pilot, a feat he repeated last season. Making the presentation was "the old redhead" himself.

Ralph Houk has been a man of destiny in the New York Yankee organization. Through perseverance, aggressiveness and intelligent application, Ralph Houk succeeded to the most glamorous and yet most challenging position in sports — manager of the Yankees. To term his first two years an unqualified success is to say the obvious.

Only three managers in the game's history ever won a World Series in their first years as pilot. Houk is the first ever to win in his first two seasons at the helm. It would be hard to improve on "two for two".

But Ralph had to do it the hard way, and maybe that's why his success has been so rewarding and gratifying.

Houk first signed with the Yankee organization in 1939. He worked his way up through the minor league system with stops at Neosho, Joplin, Binghamton, Augusta, Beaumont and Kansas City before he finally was assigned to the Yankee club in 1947. He had spent four full seasons in military service and came out a decorated combat hero with the rank of "Major".

Now, after eight long years, he was a Yankee. But there were more disappointments. There was a young catcher by the name of Berra who was just starting to make it big with the Bombers. And so, Ralph went back to the K. C. Blues for most of the 1948 and '49 seasons. He came close to quitting, but his desire to be a Yankee kept him in baseball. He was a sub catcher from 1950 through 1954 and served also as a coach in 1953 and '54.

Then the "Major" got his opportunity to manage in the minors, taking over the Yanks' top farm club at Denver. His clubs always were in the race and he piloted the Bears to a Little World Series triumph in 1957. This was an indication of things to come. He returned to the Yankees as first base coach in 1958 and was fully prepared for the manager's post when the opportunity came after the 1960 season.

In 1961, he won THE SPORTING NEWS designation as "American League Manager of the Year". He has earned the confidence and respect of his players and the admiration of his opponents. Ralph Houk today is manager of the World Champions in the truest tradition of his distinguished Yankee predecessors.

AWARDS to YANKEE CHAMPIONS

Mickey Mantle smiles proudly and his profile is reflected dramatically on his "Most Courageous Athlete Award" plaque presented the Yankee star by the Philadelphia Sports Writers Association. At the banquet, Mickey received an unprecedented second award, being named "Athlete of the Year" by the Philadelphia writers. Mickey received several other honors this past winter including his third American League MVP award and a tribute from his adopted state of Texas.

In addition to the awards pictured on this page, 1962 Yankees won a host of other honors. Bobby Richardson was named "Most Cooperative" Athlete in New York by the Sports Photographers Association. Mantle won the American League's Most Valuable Player trophy a third time . . . and there were others, too.

Bobby Richardson (center, below) receives Gold Glove Award from Judd Dunn (left) of Rawlings Sporting Goods for being chosen on the 1961 SPORTING NEWS All-Star Fielding team. Presentation was made on the Red Barber (at right) Show on WPIX.

The electric scoreboard sign in centerfield tells the story of the Yankees' 1962 spring training and offers a prediction of things to come. Tom Tresh, winner of the Longines watch as the top rookie in the Yankee camp (James P. Dawson Memorial Award), went on to capture the American League "Rookie of the Year" honors.

H. Roy Hamey, Yankee general manager, (right) receives the coveted Bill Slocum Award "for long and meritorious service to baseball" at the New York Baseball Writers' Association dinner last January at the Americana Hotel. Making the presentation is chapter vice chairman Kenny Smith of the New York Mirror.

OUTFIELDER

Born Oct. 20, 1931 at Spavinaw, Okla. Resides at Dallas, Texas. Height—6'. Weight—200. Bats left and right. Throws right. Married and the father of four boys, Mickey (10), David (7), Billy (5), and Danny (3). Color of hair, blond. Color of eyes, gray.

The Mantle family appears overjoyed as it reads the news that "Dad" had won the American League MVP again in 1962. Mickey was at a banquet honoring teammate Ralph Terry when the vote total was announced. Left to right are David (holding the family dog), wife Merlyn, Dan, Mickey Jr. and Billy.

No man has won more Most Valuable Player Awards than Yankee star Mickey Mantle. Last summer, despite physical handicaps, Mickey captured his third MVP. He is one of the most honored men in baseball history.

Today he ranks seventh on the all-time home run list with 404 at the start of the season. He needs just one more homer to equal Babe Ruth's still-standing World Series record of 15. One of the game's more dynamic figures, Mantle is a versatile player on the field. A great outfielder, brilliant switch-hitter, Mantle also is a fine base runner. He stole nine bases last year without being tossed out. For his career, he has swiped 133 bases, been thrown out only 30 times for a remarkable .816 average.

Mantle was the last player to win the Triple Crown. He is a past Hickok Belt winner; won SPORTING NEWS designation as "Player of the Year" 1956. For 12 seasons, Mickey Mantle has been a truly great Yankee, in the tradition of his predecessor, Joe DiMaggio. Mickey, too, is a team man, as 10 American League pennants since he joined the club would testify.

OUTFIELDER

Born Sept. 10, 1934 at Fargo, No. Dak. Resides at Independence, Mo. Height—6'. Weight —205. Bats left. Throws right. Married and the father of three boys, Roger Jr. (4), Kevin (2) and Randy (1); and one girl, Susan (5). Color of hair, brown. Color of eyes, green.

The other half of the legendary "M & M" outfield duo, Roger Maris has had three highly productive seasons as a Yankee. The all-time home run champion (61 in 1961), retained his Yankee laurels last season with a reduced output of 33 to bring his three season total to 133. Roger is famed for his home run productivity, but it is his all-around play that has contributed materially to the last three pennants and two World Series triumphs scored by the Yanks. A fine outfielder and a good base runner, Rog still is aiming at that .300 batting mark for a season. He has totalled 100 or more runs batted in a year for all three Yankee seasons, and twice has won the American League's Most Valuable Player Award (1960 and 1961). Winner of the coveted Hickok Belt as the Top Professional Athlete of 1961 and a host of other awards, Roger Maris at 28 should still have his most productive seasons ahead of him.

But despite his personal accomplishments, the right-fielder aims to contribute to another successful pennant drive for the Yankees.

Versatile Roger Maris slides safely into third on a daring and significant play in the third game of last fall's World Series. Rog had just driven home the first two runs and here takes third on a fly to Willie Mays. He scored a moment later on an infield out; thus scoring one and driving home two runs in a key 3-2 win over the Giants.

Tom Tresh is congratulated by his proud Father, Mike, in the Yankee clubhouse after the rookie outfielder had poled a three-run eighth inning homer to beat the Giant, 5-3, in the fifth game of the 1962 World Series. Mike was a fine defensive catcher with the White Sox and Indians for a dozen big league seasons.

When Tom Tresh won the coveted James Dawson Memorial Award (Longines Watch) as the outstanding rookie in the Yankee spring training camp in 1962, it was obvious he was to become a top candidate for American League "Rookie of the Year" honors. He became the fourth Yankee to win the Rookie award, following Gil McDougald, Bob Grim and Tony Kubek. But no one, probably least of all himself, could have imagined that Tom would be the League's runnerup shortstop on the All-Star team, then move to left field to become the defensive star of the World Series.

Tom had a tremendous freshman season, filling in for Kubek at short until Tony returned from service. When Tresh moved to the outfield for the first time in his professional career, he played it as though it were second nature. He hit 20 homers, most in his pro career, 15 of these as a shortstop. He was third in club hitting at .286, second to Roger Maris in RBIs at 93, and third in runs scored. Ten times Tommy knocked in the winning run, batting .356 in late inning clutch situations. Tresh hit .307 right-handed, .278 lefty with 13 homers as a southpaw swinger.

He reported early to spring training this year to perfect his outfield play. During the winter, this fine young competitor resumed his college courses at Central Michigan University.

OUTFIELDER

Born July 8, 1932 at Colon, Republic of Panama, where he resides. Height—6'. Weight—182. Bats right. Throws right. Married and the father of one boy, Hugh (8 mos.). Color of hair, black. Color of eyes, brown.

In his fifth season as a Yankee, Hector Lopez now is available as a first baseman, as well as an outfielder and pinch-hitter. A valuable all-around ball player, Hector upped his average to .275 last year, equal to his lifetime major league record. Of the Yankees' 96 wins in '62, Hec drove home the winning run seven times, four of these in the last two innings, and scored the winning run 10 times. A pretty valuable man!

A member of the Yankee organization for 10 years, popular Jack Reed made it with the champions as an outfielder defensive specialist. Last season he served often as Mickey Mantle's "legs," replacing the Bomber star in late innings. But it was as the offensive hero that Jack made the headlines a year ago . . . a game he'll never forget. He hit his first major league homer in the 22nd inning at Detroit to win the longest game in baseball history, seven hours.

World Series heroics are "old hat" to Yankee second baseman Bobby Richardson, pictured above scoring on a passed ball in the fifth game of the '62 World Series. Pitcher Jack Sanford makes the belated tag. Umpire is Al Barlick and Roger Maris is at the right. Richardson set all sorts of hitting records in the 1960 and 1961 series, hitting .367 and .391 respectively.

At 27, Robert Clinton Richardson is the dean of the Yankee infield. He was up briefly in 1955 and 1956, but came to stay in 1957 along with his shortstop sidekick, Tony Kubek. Bobby, at 5'9", may be the smallest man on the club, but he has become an increasingly "big" man in the Yankee scheme of things.

His sixth full season as a Yankee easily was Bob's best. He was the "iron man" of the team, playing in 161 games and setting an American League seasonal record with 692 times at bat. Richardson led the league in total hits with 209, the first American Leaguer to get 200 hits since Al Kaline turned the trick in 1955 and the first Yankee since Phil Rizzuto's MVP season of 1950.

Bobby completed a tremendous season in 1962 by snaring Willie McCovey's hot smash with men on second and third to close out a thrilling and victorious World Series. "Rich" gained much support for the Most Valuable Player award and ran a strong second to teammate Mickey Mantle.

Richardson, a brilliant fielder and double play pivot man, took some advice from Wally Moses after last year's Old Timers' Game. The Hillerich & Bradsby people (makers of the Louisville Slugger bat) sent original model bats to each old timer at the Yankee classic. Moses brought his bat to Bobby and suggested he try it. He did and hit .302.

Free cigars and handshakes all around were the order of the day early last September when Tony Kubek (left) and Tom Tresh became proud fathers for the first time. It was a boy for the Kubeks (Tony III) and a a girl for the Tresh family (Michele). Neither Tony nor Tom are cigar smokers, but the occasion demanded a "gag" shot. Kubek, the Yankees' regular shortstop, was replaced by Tresh most of last season while Tony fulfilled a National Guard tour of military duty.

Last August 7th wasn't like any other day in the 1962 pennant race. The Yankees were playing in Minnesota and beat the strong runnerup club by a 14-1 score. But the significant event was the return of shortstop Tony Kubek to the lineup. After nine months of service with the Wisconsin National Guard (on his second tour of duty), Tony stepped to the plate and belted a home run. From there he went on to hit a neat .314 in 45 games, the first time he's been over the .300 mark. But Manager Ralph Houk and his teammates think it will happen often in the future . . . batting .300 and hitting home runs, that is.

Kubek first joined the Bombers in 1957 as a 20-year-old shortstop. He won the Longines Watch as top rookie in spring training and went on to "Rookie of the Year" designation, while hitting a robust .297. In the World Series that fall in his native Milwaukee, Tony hit two homers in one game. In the intervening years, the personable and talented shortstop has played seven positions (all except the battery). But now he's back at shortstop to stay, unless an emergency should dictate otherwise, although he is an excellent outfielder.

Tony was married just before going back into service in 1961. On road trips, Kubek appropriately rooms with his keystone mate and good friend, Bobby Richardson.

Improvement is a word clearly understood by Clete Boyer. The "Fancy Dan" third baseman put in a claim as the top fielding third baseman in all of baseball in 1961. Last year, Clete worked hard on his hitting, upped his lifetime batting average some 50 points to a respectable .272.

But in so doing, the lithe third sacker slipped a bit in the field. This spring, Boyer concentrated on his fielding magic and gave every indication that this would be his biggest major league season yet.

Last year, the 26-year-old Boyer set personal highs in home runs with 18 and runs batted in with 68.

Clete is one of seven ball playing brothers, six of whom already have taken a fling at pro baseball. Ken, the Cardinals' great slugging third sacker, was the first successful Boyer. Cloyd, former Cardinal and Kansas City Athletic, is a minor league pitching coach for the Yankees. Young Ronnie in his first spring training with the World Champions made a fine showing as an infielder.

In the World Series against the Giants, Clete pounded out a .318 average, second only to teammate Tom Tresh. Clete recently has moved to New Jersey where he will become a Yankee of the first flight. He's made great strides, but the future of Clete Boyer is still ahead of him.

Yankee third base "magician" Clete Boyer grabbed a high throw and made this great tag on Los Angeles second baseman Billy Moran in a late season Stadium game. And it wasn't even a close call as umpire Ed Hurley prepares to make the "out" call.

Why there's a little of Loch Lomond in every bottle of Ballantine's

Loch Lomond, Scotland's celebrated lake of ballad and verse, imparts something very special to Ballantine's Scotch Whisky. It lends some of its serenity and sunny-lightness to the spirit. Realistically, Loch Lomond's azure waters are perfect for making Scotch. For good Scotch requires a water of uncommon gentleness. And the Loch's water is measured at only 3 to 5 degrees of hardness (London's water measures up to 300 degrees). Another important consideration: Ballantine's contains a delicate harmony of 42 Scotch Whiskies, each contributing its particular flavor to this Scotch's pleasing personality.

The final result is Scotch never brash or heavy—nor so limply light that it merely teases the taste buds.

The final result is Scotch Whisky as Scotch Whisky should be. Good-natured, full of proud heritage, flaunting its authentic flavor and quality to all those who enjoy its company. Just a few reasons why: the more you know about Scotch the more you like Ballantine's.

The Pepitones "mug" it up in the adjoining photo and Pop belts one into the seats to help win an early season game in the other accompanying photo. The father and son photo was taken just two weeks after the arrival last November 21st of Joe Jr.

"Quick wrists . . . a good looking hitter with natural instincts." That's what Joe DiMaggio said of Joe Pepitone at the Yankee Advance Training Camp in Ft. Lauderdale in 1962. That prediction and Ralph Houk's confidence in the Brooklyn-born 22-year-old will be tested this year as "Peppy" bids to become the Yankees' regular first sacker.

Now a resident of the Bronx, Pepitone was a much-sought-after young outfielder-first baseman in Brooklyn as a free swinging member of Nathan's Famous (Hot Dogs) team. Most other major league clubs lost interest in Joe after he was accidentally shot through the chest in a high school classroom. But his great desire to become a Yankee may soon pay off for the World Champions. "As a little kid, I wanted to be a Yankee. I guess I've never wanted anything else," Pepitone said to a reporter last spring.

Pepitone served a Yankee apprenticeship during the first half of 1962. He played first, the outfield and pinch hit. He batted only .239, but played well in the field and hit seven homers. Actually he entered the record books with his slugging prowess, tying a major league record by hitting two home runs in one inning, May 23, 1962 versus Kansas City.

He spent about six weeks in Richmond last year hitting .315 with eight homers. He's back at Yankee Stadium now . . . he hopes to stay.

Here's Phil Linz nailing Minnesota catcher Earl Battey with a leaping tag, but the Twins' catcher broke up the DP with his slide.

Playing shortstop, second, third and even right field on one occasion, young Phil Linz is the Yankee handyman. Basically a shortstop, Phil competed with Tom Tresh for the position in the spring of 1962 while Tony Kubek was in service. While Phil did not win the competition, he made a major contribution to the Yankees' winning cause last season.

He was the fifth leading hitter on the club with a .287 average. He led the Yanks in pinch-hitting, garnering seven hits in 15 at bats for a .467 mark. Phil's first major league hit was a two run homer, his only round tripper with the Yankees.

The bespectacled infielder (he tried contact lenses this spring, but went back to his regular glasses) comes by his strong major league hitting honestly. In his last two minor league campaigns the native Baltimorean led the Texas League in hitting (with .349 in 1961) and the Carolina League (with .321 in 1960). In each of his five full minor league seasons, Linz increased his batting average. He goes with the pitch, scattering his shots to all fields.

Phil Linz may be the Yankees' No. 1 infield utility man, but he doesn't weaken the club when he's in the regular lineup. Phil's an aggressive, driving ball player, with good speed on the bases and a flair for the dramatic.

Catcher Elston Howard puts the tag on Red Sox shortstop Ed Bressoud as umpire Joe Paparella makes the call in a mid-season (1962) game.

The number one catching post on the Yankees belongs to Elston Howard . . . without a question. But it wasn't acquired easily. Howard was in the shadow of Yogi Berra for many years, but he learned his trade well. In addition, Ellie filled in successfully in left field as well as at first base.

In 1961, Howard challenged for the American League batting title, hitting at a .348 clip. He slipped 69 points to a still strong .279 last year. At the same time he matched his season high home run mark of 21, set in '61, and topped his personal career high in runs batted in at 91. In nine big league seasons (up to 1963),Howard has hit exactly 100 homers, with a career batting mark of .285.

Ellie has been named to the American League All-Star squad the last three seasons and five of the last six years. In the 1960 losing Series with Pittsburgh, he hit a rousing .462 and he won the coveted Babe Ruth Award as the outstanding performer in the 1958 Series. That was the set with Milwaukee in which the Yanks came back from a 1-3 deficit to win, partly on the thrilling defensive work in left field by Elston Howard.

In 1962, Howard knocked in the deciding run in 12 of the Yankees' 96 wins. The converted outfielder led American League catchers in 1962 with a .995 average.

This is Yogi Berra's 18th season as a Yankee and before the year is over, the popular veteran will have passed Babe Ruth's 2,084 games as a Yankee, trailing only immortal Lou Gehrig's 2,164 games in the famed New York pinstripes.

The colorful catcher, who set many a seasonal and World Series record, now is dividing his time between the familiar catching chores and his new duties as first base coach. Yogi didn't know much about catching when he joined the Yanks late in the 1946 season, but he went on to become one of the game's all-time great receivers.

He has hit more home runs than any catcher in the game's history, 305 (plus 45 as an outfielder) to rank 15th on the all-time homer list. Berra was the first man to hit a World Series pinch home run and he's played the most Series games (74), has garnered the most hits (71) and most RBIs (39) of any performer in World Series history.

Three times Yogi has won the American League's Most Valuable Player award, 1951, 1954 and 1955. Labelled a "character" and the butt of many jokes early in his career, Yogi has grown impressively with the game to which he has contributed so much. Today, as the Yankees' senior citizen, Larry "Yogi" Berra still is a vital cog in the World Champions' organization as catcher-coach.

Spring training isn't all work for the John Blanchard family. Here the Yankee slugger relaxes with his family. Enjoying a Coke are John with Timmy (4) and wife Nancy with Paul (2) in the back yard of their spring training home in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

The clutch-hitting hero of 1961, John Blanchard is determined to erase his disappointing 1962 season by returning to the form that made him the talk of baseball just two seasons ago. The personable Blanchard was scheduled to do a lot of catching this year, back of Ellie Howard, and to fill in as an outfielder and pinchhitter for Manager Ralph Houk's Bombers.

In 1961, as Yankee fans will recall happily, the Minneapolis backstop hit a robust .305 including 21 home runs, 54 RBIs with 149 total bases on his 74 hits. He tied a major league record by hitting four home runs on consecutive times at bat and two of these were as a pinch-hitter. He just missed the fifth homer in a row when a towering fly was collared a foot from the fence. A Chicago writer selected John's feat as the outstanding sports thrill of the year.

In three World Series, John has rapped out nine hits in 22 times at bat, for a resounding .409 average, including three doubles and two homers.

To get back in the '61 groove this season, Blanchard adopted an off-season program designed to correct the "slow hands" that plagued him a year ago. And he reported to spring training this year well under his weight of the previous spring. If determination is any criterion, 1963 will be a banner season for the Yanks and Johnny Blanchard.

Behind the Scenes at Yankee Stadium

Here is the Yankee medical staff! Headed by Dr. Sidney S. Gaynor (center above), the Yankees employ a competent staff of medical advisory personnel to check on and care for both the Yankee athletes and the club's farmhands. Dr. Gaynor is chief orthopedic surgeon at New York's Lenox Hill Hospital. He has been the club physician for many years and attends each home game as well as spring training . . . The Yankee trainers are Joe Soares (right), the head trainer, and his associate at the left, Don Seger. Both trainers recently moved up to the Yankees after spending several years as trainers for Yankee minor league clubs.

Here are two men who have been Yankees longer than anyone on the field. What's more, they spend more time under the stands at Yankee Stadium than any other club personnel. Below are the clubhouse men who handle the uniforms and equipment as well as the clubhouse. Pete ("Big Pete") Sheehy (right) has been with the Yanks since 1927, while his assistant, Pete ("Little Pete") Previte, has been here since 1942.

The operation of a major league baseball club is considerably more involved than just the field operation . . . as important as that is.

But to get championship calibre players, a strong farm system is required. To keep those players well and at their respective physical peaks takes the care and attention of a capable medical staff. To get the team to its destinations throughout the league and in spring training, to house and feed the squad and do multiple other services, the club needs a competent traveling secretary. To keep the players looking neat and clean and to provide a proper locker room setting takes knowledgeable clubhouse men. All of these the Yankees have. Here are a few of those who make it possible for the Yankees to operate effectively.

This Yankee doesn't get his name in the headlines, but he's mighty popular with his teammates. He's the man who pitches EVERY DAY, serving up fat pitches for the batting practice sessions. He's batting practice pitcher Spud Murray, who wears uniform No. 55. He has fine control and a rubber arm.

Here's Yankee traveling secretary Bruce Henry who attends to all the details pertaining to travel, on the road accommodations and feeding of the club, spring training arrangements and the like. Bruce spent many years as a minor league business manager before returning to the Bombers in his present position.

Commissioner Ford Frick presents World Series award to Yankee star Whitey Ford at special ceremonies last year. The occasion was repeated this opening day. Whitey has participated in nine Series as a Yankee; missed two others while in military service. At left is Mel Allen, who MCd the presentation ceremony and Bill Guilfoile of the Public Relations Department.

Edward Charles "Whitey" Ford has provided New York and Yankee fans with the outstanding post-war pitching story, surpassing even the greats of a decade ago . . . Allie Reynolds, Vic Raschi and Ed Lopat. The popular southpaw, frequently troubled by arm and shoulder ailments, nevertheless has compiled one of the outstanding pitching records of the century.

Going into the 1963 season, Whitey had won 175 games, lost only 71 for a winning percentage of .711. This is the highest winning percentage of any pitcher with over 150 wins since 1900. In 2296 innings of pitching, Ford has yielded only 1954 hits and has posted a remarkable 2.78 earned run average. Over the years, he has gained an edge on every American League club.

He established a new World Series record last fall by completing 33 2/3 consecutive scoreless innings. He has won more games (10), fanned more men (82) and started more Series contests (19) than any pitcher in history.

Whitey has won a host of awards including THE SPORTING NEWS' designation as the American League pitcher of the years 1955 and 1961 and the SPORT MAGAZINE Corvette and the Babe Ruth Award as the outstanding player in the 1961 World Series.

In his top season of 1961, Ford won 25 games and copped the Cy Young Award as the game's greatest pitcher. This he surely has been. And the little lefty is confident he can contribute to more Yankee victories in the future.

It is almost 10 years since Ralph Terry first signed a Yankee contract at the ripe old age of 17. It takes time to learn how to pitch and, though lanky Ralph gave promise, delivery seemed some time away. So Ralph was traded to Kansas City in 1957. He was a losing pitcher, with promise.

But the Yankees still had high hopes for him and reacquired Ralph in a big trade with the A's. Gradually, the promise was fulfilled. In 1961, the native Oklahoman (who now lives in Kansas) suddenly made it, posting a 16-3 record. Last season, Terry moved up to the 20-game class with a 23-12 record and finally was over the .500 mark for his career. Last year, he led the league in starts (39), innings pitched (299) and victories.

With 39 wins and only 15 defeats in the last two seasons, Ralph today is a genuine star. And his most productive years should be ahead of him.

Last fall was particularly rewarding for the 6'3" right hander. After losing his first World Series start and his fourth without a victory, the tide turned. Terry won his last two starts including the seventh and final game, a brilliant 1-0 shutout win over San Francisco, that brought acclaim to Terry and designation as winner of the Babe Ruth Award and the SPORT MAGAZINE Corvette as the outstanding performer in the 1962 World Series.

Ralph Terry tosses a ball in the air as he proudly contemplates his moment of triumph in last fall's World Series. For his outstanding Series performances, Ralph was awarded the SPORT MAGAZINE Chevrolet Corvette at appropriate post-series luncheon ceremonies. Previous Yankee Corvette award winners were Don Larsen (1956), Bob Turley (1958), Bobby Richardson (1960) and Whitey Ford (1961).

Mutual congratulations are offered by Bill Stafford and Roger Maris, co-heroes of the third World Series game in 1962. Bill survived a drive off his left shin to post his first World Series victory by a 3-2 score. Maris drove in two big runs.

With only two full seasons of major league pitching behind him, Bill Stafford has moved up to a front line position as a Yankee starting hurler. Perhaps too much has been expected of the 24-year-old right-hander from Athens, N. Y. (now resides in Yonkers).

Bill's record in 1962 was not quite equal to his freshman mark of 1961. He posted the same won-lost record each season (14-9), pitched more innings (213 to 195) and increased his strikeout total (109 to 101) last season. But his earned run average was up from 2.68 to 3.68 and his usual pin-point control was not quite up to his earlier standard.

Bill came up to the Yankees late in 1960 and was an impressive performer from the start. Even as a rookie in the World Series that fall, the elongated right-hander was effective. In three series to date, Stafford has a combined 2.06 ERA.

He was particularly effective in the September stretch drive, winning three without a loss. Bill was 3-0 versus Minnesota last season and had a 1.70 ERA vs. Detroit. Lifetime against the Twins, Bill has a 5-0 mark. He is 4-0 against the Athletics and 3-0 versus the Red Sox, but has lost all five decisions to Baltimore.

With his ability and natural progress, Bill Stafford's future should be bright.

There is not much question about the place newcomer Stan Williams occupies in the Yankee scheme of things. The 6'4" right-hander looms large in Manager Ralph Houk's plans for 1963 . . . and the future. Otherwise the Yanks certainly would not have traded popular Moose Skowron for the former Dodger right-hander. The Yankees felt they need another regular starting pitcher. And, after a spring training season, they feel they got the right man.

Big Stan is only 26, but he's been a big leaguer since mid-1958 when the Dodgers brought him up. Going into this season he had posted 57 wins against 46 losses, with only 760 hits in 872 innings pitched. Better still, Stan fanned 657 men, walked 429 in these 872 frames. In 1961, Stan struck out 205 batters, most by any National League right-handed pitcher.

But for a quirk in fate, perhaps Stan never would have been available to the Yankees. He had the misfortune of walking the Giants' Jim Davenport with the bases full to force in the winning run in the third and final playoff game last fall. Just the day before, Williams had been the star of the Dodgers' comeback victory, hurling five shutout relief innings. But as Stan himself says: "Maybe it all turned out for the best. I know I'm happy to be here and anxious to prove to the Yankees that they made the right move in getting me."

Stan Williams, at left, demonstrates his form to pitching coach Johnny Sain (center) at the Ft. Lauderdale training camp. That's relief pitcher Bill Kunkel, also acquired over the winter, looking on.

Jim Coates pitched in 50 Yankee games in 1962, the most appearances since he first started pitching 11 years ago. But big Jim was only one game over .500, at 7-6. But even that somewhat disappointing mark left his career won-lost record at an amazing 37-15 for a .712 percentage, a point higher than Whitey Ford.

In 1960, Jim won his first nine decisions and wound up the season with a 13-3 record. His top effort last season was a brilliant one-hit relief chore against Baltimore on June 8th. He relieved Ford in the second inning and gave up only one harmless hit the rest of the way to gain a vital 1-0 win over the Orioles. While Coates did not have his best year in '62, he was among the stingiest in yielding home runs, allowing only one every 13.1 innings.

Jim is a rough competitor and plays to win. If you ever watch batting practice you'll know he throws as hard when his teammates are taking their swings as he does when the opposition is trying to beat him.

The lanky 30-year-old right-hander from the unlikely town of Village, Virginia serves as a spot starter, long and short relief man on Manager Ralph Houk's staff. Jim doesn't care what he does as long as he can contribute to another Yankee pennant.

Buddy Leo Daley, the Yankee southpaw from Orange, California has a rather deceptive statistical record. He came up through the Cleveland organization, was traded to Kansas City and eventually (1961) was obtained by the Yankees. Twice with the A's he won 16 games and made the American League All Star team.

But Bud has yet to be a big winner for the Yankees. After working more than 600 innings in three years, Bud was on the mound for only 105 last season, mainly in relief roles. After a fair start a year ago, Daley made 14 consecutive relief appearances (from June 29th to August 11th) in which he pitched scoreless ball—over a 35 1/3 inning span. Last July he was 3-0 with a 1.89 ERA.

A control hurler, Bud allowed only 21 walks last season. In 25 of his 43 appearances in 1962 he did not permit an earned run.

The Yankees middle relief man has excelled in World Series and All Star play. In three series games, he has a 0.00 ERA, allowing just two unearned runs in eight innings, and none at all in the two All Star appearances.

Manager Ralph Houk is counting on Daley for valuable service in the 1963 title defense by the World Champions.

Born June 2, 1931 at Jackson, Miss., where he resides. Height—6'1". Weight—190. Throws left. Bats right. Married and the father of two girls, Vivian (7) and Deborah (5); and one boy, Marshall (4). Color of hair, brown. Color of eyes, brown.

A year ago, Marshall Bridges was an unknown quantity, a newcomer to the American League. But that indefinite status was quickly erased as the "Sheriff" developed into the early season bullpen ace of the Yankees. Overall, he appeared in 52 games (all in relief) to top the staff in total mound appearances. He posted a 3.13 ERA, second only to Whitey Ford's 2.90.

By the end of June, the big Mississippi southpaw had an amazing 1.22 ERA. Actually he didn't allow a run in his first 14 appearances last year. He topped the staff in strikeout average with 8.25 whiffs per nine inning game. And the Sheriff was lowest among the Yanks in allowing home runs, granting only four all season (one in every 18 innings).

Overall, Bridges has a .667 won-lost record (20 and 10), with 212 strikeouts and only 119 walks in 226 major league innings pitched. Before coming to the Yankees from Cincinnati, Marshall had scored a moderate success, but never was able to maintain a place on a major league roster for a full season.

An elaborate story teller, Bridges was the butt of several well-intentioned Yankee pranksters this spring following his unfortunate shooting in a Florida club on the second day of training. Marshall has completely recovered from the leg injury and hopes to make another notable contribution to a Yankee pennant campaign.

This is a mighty important year for Luis Arroyo . . . and for the Yankees. The doughty little left-hander came off the 1961 season as the game's greatest relief pitcher. He had won THE SPORTING NEWS award as "Fireman of the Year". Things had never looked brighter for the popular Puerto Rican veteran. And then came the arm miseries.

Arroyo was put on the disabled list for several weeks. When he had set a league record for most appearances in a season by a left-hander (65 in 1961), he appeared in only 27 games last summer. His innings pitched were reduced from 119 to 34 and his won-lost record went from 15-5 to 1-3, and from 19 saves to seven.

At his age (variously estimated between 36 and 38) and after 15 years of wear and tear on his valued left arm, a comeback seemed questionable. But Luis had been a real Yankee life-saver in 1960 and 1961 and Manager Ralph Houk wanted to give Arroyo every chance at a return to form. The club permitted Luis to pitch occasional winter ball during the last off-season. He had missed winter work in 1961-62.

The bullpen magician reported early this spring and there was a look of determination on the man. His spring performances have raised fond hopes that the Luis Arroyo of 1963 will approach the Luis Arroyo of 1961. That surely would make him a strong candidate for comeback honors.

Bobby Richardson and other teammates "glad hand" Luis Arroyo after he stopped an Oriole threat to "save" the 1962 opening day win for the Yankees, 7-6.

As the 1962 baseball season approached, Jim Bouton was on the roster of an AA club, getting a "look" in training camp by Manager Ralph Houk. The manager obviously liked what he saw, because the young right-hander from Ridgewood, New Jersey, was added to the Yankee roster at the start of the season and remained all year to make a growing contribution to the Yanks' pennant success.

Posting a 7-7 record and a 3.99 ERA, 24-year-old Jim yielded only 124 hits in the 133 innings he pitched in 36 games. There certainly are two contests in his freshman year that Bouton will never forget. One was his first major league start in which he threw a seven-hit shutout at the Washington Senators. The other game that Jim will recall to his children some distant date will be the June 24th contest at Detroit . . . the longest game in major league annals (seven hours). Jim came on in relief in the 16th inning and finished the 22-inning contest, pitching shutout ball over the last seven frames. He became the winning pitcher when Jack Reed hit his first homer with a man aboard in the 22nd.

Bouton spent the past winter in military service, being released during the training season. Just before Christmas he was married. Normally, in the off-season Bouton is a student at Western Michigan University, one of several present Yankees still attending college.

Call it the "sophomore jinx" if you want to . . . but to Rollie Sheldon his second year in the majors is just a bad memory.

The lanky "Connecticut Yankee" had played a major role in the spectacular 1961 Yankee season when so many "big" events occurred at the Stadium. Sheldon had made the Yankees after only 150 innings of pitching in Class D ball. He impressed Manager Ralph Houk, after a 15-1 season at Auburn in the New York-Penn League, and took advantage of the opportunity given him by the Yankee manager. His first season with the Champions produced an impressive 11-5 record with a 3.59 earned run average.

But last year Rollie couldn't get untracked. The confusion was compounded as he tried to correct flaws and he wound up the season with a 7-8 mark and a 5.49 ERA.

But Sheldon, a newly-wed just a year ago, takes the game of baseball seriously. He worked on his motion in front of a mirror all winter; lifted weights and determined to come to camp this spring ready for the opportunity that was open to him.

The University of Connecticut off-season student is a Yankee at heart and is determined to prove himself all over again . . . just like he did in the spring of 1961 when he captured the Longines Watch as the top rookie in camp.

. Last year the Army and a sore arm detoured Hal Reniff's Yankee career which was off to an auspicious start in mid-1961. Called up in mid-season that year, husky Hal posted a neat 2.60 ERA while winning two games as a sparkling late inning relief man. Only 23, Hal was trained for his present assignment, serving his minor league apprenticeship as a relief pitcher. Healthy again this spring, Reniff may give the Yankees the strongest bullpen in baseball.

A couple of top-ranking young pitching prospects who may be around part of this season to contribute to the Yankee pennant drive are Al Downing, a southpaw from Trenton and Jack Cullen, a right-hander from Belleville, N.J. Both have had brief previous trials with the Yankees and the club's "brass" rates them as future Yankees.

FIRST BASEMAN

Born Feb. 6, 1926 at Springfield, Mo. Resides at North Adams, Mass. Height—6'4". Weight—219. Bats left. Throws left. Married and the father of two boys, Dale Jr. (14), and Jonny (7). Color of hair, brown. Color of eyes, brown.

Dale Long won't be seen in action too often at Yankee Stadium this year, but he plays a vital role nevertheless. The 37-year-old veteran from Massachusetts is an important left-handed pinch-hitter and utility first baseman. In the latter category, Dale will fill in at first whenever Manager Houk thinks it advisable. And he'll do a competent job in both duties.

His first 1963 game will be Dale's 1,000th as a major leaguer. He won early recognition as a first baseman in the National League, serving with six other clubs before getting to the Yanks. In 1956 with the Pirates, Dale hit eight home runs in eight consecutive games, a major league record. Lifetime, Long has hit .267 (.270 in the National League and .257 in the American).

The Day... ...of Days
Old Timers Day

THIS YEAR . . . IT'S ON SATURDAY, JULY 27th

There is no event outside of the World Series that has more drama and sheer excitement than the Yankees' traditional Old Timers' Day. Here are a few scenes from last year's highly successful event that attracted more than 52,000 fans to Yankee Stadium. This year's colorful "day" will be held on Saturday afternoon, July 27th when the contending Minnesota Twins are Stadium visitors. New members of the "Hall of Fame" will be honored along with other baseball greats. Another new twist has been worked out for this year's Old Timers' event which is certain to prove of great interest to the fans. Watch the newspapers and listen to Yankee TV and radio for details.

Always the big event at Old Timers' Day at Yankee Stadium is the introduction of the Yankee Clipper, Joe DiMaggio. Here, wearing his familiar old (retired) No. 5 uniform, he is seen running out to greet other diamond heroes to the tumultous applause of the crowd. Later, in the abbreviated game, Joe hit one to deep center and came all the way around for an inside-the-park home run.

Heads bowed, former and present day stars joined fans in tribute to departed members of the 1937 All-Star teams at last summer's Old Timers' Day. The band played Auld Lang Syne. Left to right are Hank Greenberg and Joe DiMaggio ("Hall of Fame" members), plus present-day stars Yogi Berra and Mickey Mantle.

Shades of yesteryear! Here's Pepper Martin belly-sliding into second base at last year's event and he got the stolen base. This was typical of spirited action by old timer guests, who have as much fun participating as fans do in watching.

Covering the Yankees

The biggest sports story in the country . . . that's the New York Yankees. Day in and day out, more words are written, more people cover and more words are spoken on TV and radio about the New York Yankees than any other sports organization anywhere. . . . The New York metropolitan press, the wire services, syndicated columnists, regional writers from cities where other clubs play . . . all cover the Yankees in spring and throughout the season. Yankee games are broadcast daily, televised on more than 130 occasions and TVd over the CBS Television Network on the "Game of the Week" on Saturdays and Sundays.

This was "Picture Day" at Yankee Stadium last September and, for once, the Yankees "snapped" their friends, the photographers. Utilizing his Army photo training, Yankee shortstop Tony Kubek "shot" the photogs in action. This is typical of the coverage the Yanks receive regularly.

Here is the distinguished team of four broadcasters who give Yankee fans the play-by-play each day of the season. This noted team of mike men are, left to right: Jerry Coleman, Walter "Red" Barber, Mel Allen and Phil Rizzuto . . . Allen is the dean of the Yankee sportscasters, having been the "Voice of the Yankees" since 1939. Barber, now in his 30th year before a mike, has been a Yankee broadcaster since 1954 and Phil joined the team a few seasons back. This will be Coleman's first year before the Yankee mikes . . . WCBS is the originating station of the Yankees' 40-plus station "Home of Champions" network. The originating television outlet is WPIX (Channel 11).

The Yankees... Down Through the Years

In the belief that baseball fans are interested in the outstanding achievements that have helped to write the history of our national game, the Yankee Yearbook presents on this page some of the major records of the New York Yankees that have helped to make this club the nation's best known sports organization.

Developing Future Stars

Yankee Farm System

The lifeblood of any baseball organization is its minor league system . . . the farm clubs. And, befitting the World Champions, there is no more important function within the Yankee organization than its farm system. The success of the Yankees in the future will depend to a large extent on the development of young players to replace today's stars.

Eighteen of today's Yankees were developed in the club's minor league organization. Last year alone, four youngsters made the Yankees in their freshman years, a remarkable figure for any club . . . but even more unusual for a defending World Champion. Tom Tresh (Rookie of the Year), Phil Linz, Jim Bouton and Joe Pepitone all were first year men. The Yankees are continually rebuilding while winning. Going back only five years, to the 1958 World Champions, only six present day Yankees were on that club . . . Mickey Mantle, Yogi Berra, Whitey Ford, Elston Howard, Tony Kubek and Bobby Richardson.

Tradition plays a part with families, too. The Boyer family now has three brothers in the Yankee organization. Left to right are minor league pitching coach Cloyd Boyer; the Yankee's fine third baseman—Clete; and younger brother—Ronnie, also a third baseman. They were photographed at spring training. In the past, Charlie Keller's two sons were minor league prospects in the Yankee system. Tom Tresh, son of former major league catcher, Mike, signed with the Yankees on his Dad's recommendation even though Mike had never been a Yankee. Coach Jim Hegan's son, Mike, a fine looking young first baseman, also signed with the World Champions.

Quantity is not, and never has been, the objective of the Yankee farm system. Quality is the objective. If a scout approaches a young prospect on behalf of the Yankees, he is doing so because he believes he can make the big club. There is no greater honor in the game than being a Yankee. The New York Yankees are the most highly publicized and best known team in all sports. This club has won an incredible 27 American League pennants and a record 20 World Championships.

"It's great to be a Yankee," said Joe DiMaggio (and scores of others who have worn the famed pin stripe. It takes work . . . application . . . desire. But the effort is worth it. Just ask the present Yankees, the highest paid team in baseball history.

Despite all of the honors and championships won by the Yankees, the team is building for tomorrow. Great opportunities exist today for ambitious young ball players who set their goals high—at Yankee Stadium.

Just before the 1963 spring training season opened, all of the eastern area scouts were called to the Stadium to discuss plans for the Yankee future. Front row, left to right, are: Pete Kalison, assistant to the farm director; Johnny Johnson, farm director and a veteran of more than 15 years as a Yankee; Bill Skiff, director of scouts in the eastern area and New England; scouts Frank O'Rourke, Harry Hesse and Art Dede. In the back row are: scouts Randy Gumpert, Al Todd, Tom Kane, Frank Novasel, Bill Yancey, the late Bump Hadley and Bob Decker. The director of scouting for the Yankees is Jack White, another veteran of the organization who has held numerous administrative positions over the last 17 years.

The above photos are typical of Ft. Lauderdale in early spring. At the left is a scene of the opening spring exhibition game this past March when a capacity crowd of more than 7,400 jammed beautiful Fort Lauderdale Stadium to see the Yankees play the Orioles. The new Stadium is considered the finest in the country for spring training. Scene at upper right shows part of the sprawling Ft. Lauderdale Beach, the headquarters hotel, the Yankee Clipper (at left) and arrow points to the Yankee Clipper Motel where the Yankee players reside.

Yankee Spring Training-1963
Ft. Lauderdale, Florida

Here is an aerial view of Ft. Lauderdale Stadium, spring training home of the Yankees and summer home of the defending champion Ft. Lauderdale Yankees of the Florida State League. Note extra practice field at extreme right.

Camp coordinator and scout Johnny Neun (left below) aids young Yankee prospects in the sliding pit at Ft. Lauderdale. Neun, long-time Yankee and former major league manager, was the last man to perform an unassisted triple play, accomplishing the feat at first base for Detroit on May 31, 1927. Left to right are Neun, infielder Mike Mathieson, outfielders Elvio Jimenez, Ron Solomini and Steve Whitaker (sliding).

Minor league manager Wilmer Shantz, a former catcher, fires the rocket gun to give Yankee catcher Elston Howard (No. 32) extra practice at catching towering pop-ups back of the plate.

It takes practice to perfect the double play! And Tony Kubek (left) and Bobby Richardson have been working together on play at second base since their early minor league years. They give the Yankees tremendous "down the middle" defense. This is another training camp scene.

Yankee Family Portraits

Yankee Bill Stafford takes time off to catch up on pile of correspondence with the aid of his wife, Janice, in their Mount Vernon home.

Tom Tresh, 1962 American League "Rookie of the Year" strums on his guitar and apparently is entertaining his wife Cherie. Tom has real ability as a folk singer and instrumentalist . . . as well as in left field.

Bobby and Alice Richardson are justifiably proud of Ron, Christie, and Robby.

Rookie first baseman Joe Pepitone is pictured at Christmastime with his growing family. That's wife, Barbara, daughter Eileen, and baby son, Joe Jr.

It looks like another banner season coming up for the Football Giants at Yankee Stadium in 1963.

Back from last year will be virtually the same cast that swept to the National Football League's eastern division title on the wings of an incredible 12-2 record.

That eastern victory, incidentally, was the fifth in the last seven years for the Giants, an unparalleled stretch of success that began when the Maramen moved into the Stadium back in 1956.

Under Jim Lee Howell, now personnel director, the Giants won the world championship their first year at the Stadium and followed with divisional wins in 1958 and 1959. Al Sherman, the NFL's only two-time "Coach of the Year," took over in 1961 and has won two straight eastern crowns.

Winning three in a row is a rare feat indeed but Coach Sherman will try for it with a veteran ball club that has speed, scoring punch and depth.

The key man, of course, is venerable quarterback Y. A. Tittle, who last season enjoyed his greatest year in pro ball. "Yat" set a new NFL touchdown throwing record for one year with 33 and also tied the one-game mark of seven TD tosses.

Tittle finished his productive campaign with 200 completions in 375 attempts for 3,224 yards, breaking every passing record in the Giant book. His achievements won him unanimous selection on every All-Pro team.

Returning also in 1963 will be Tittle's great receivers, Del Shofner, Frank Gifford, Joe Walton and newcomer Aaron Thomas.

Alex Webster, a great all-around halfback; Phil King, who came into stardom last year, and Joe Morrison will be carrying the ball behind a top offensive line that numbers Darrell Dess and Bookie Bolin at guards, Jack Stroud and Rosey Brown at tackles and Greg Larson as a center replacement for the departed Ray Wietecha.

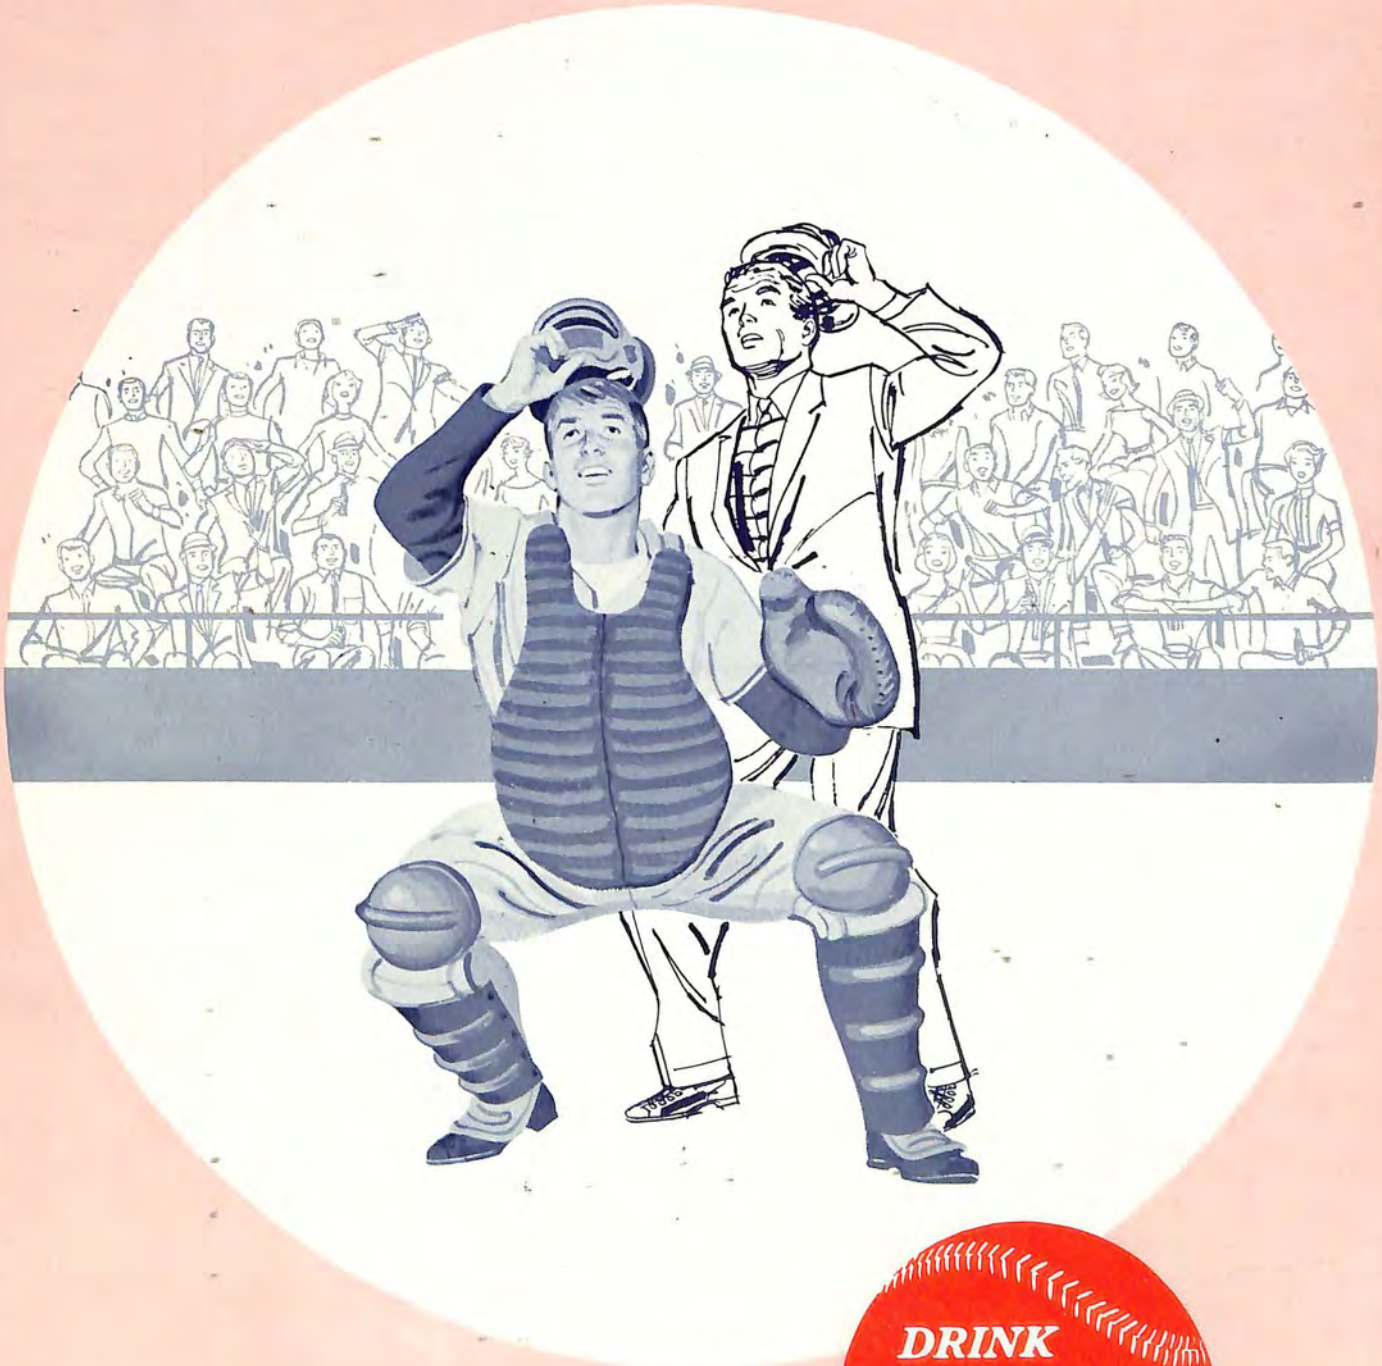

On defense, a Giant trademark over the years, Sherman will have all the old favorites—Andy Robustelli, Sam Huff, Jim Patton, Jim Katcavage and Dick Lynch.

Among the newcomers who may stir next season's Yankee Stadium crowds are Mississippi's All-American quarterback Glynn Griffing, Florida halfback Dick Skelly and Pittsburgh linebacker Lou Slaby, to mention a few.

Although baseball is still in the air, football is just around the corner. Get your Giant tickets now at the Giant office, 10 Columbus Circle, New York 19, N. Y. They'll be going fast, so don't wait until September!

Enjoy that
