Paul Snyder

A solidly built individual, with a refreshing sense of humor, is basically the same Paul Snyder who spent much of his undergraduate time at the University of Buffalo playing football and wrestling. That he spent as much time cracking the books is established by the fact that he was awarded his diploma in 1957.

No part of either his athletic or learning hours was spent idly for Paul Snyder, getting a great start from his blocks, parlayed the aggressiveness learned on the fields of friendly strife with his keen mind and the net result was incredible success in the world of business.

Snyder never lost his tremendous interest in sports. Thus, when the opportunity to become owner of the Buffalo Braves in the NBA, presented itself, he walked right in supreme in the belief that, as with Freezer Queen Frozen Foods, Inc., no part of failure was in his, or the Braves, future. A man does not do easily something to which he is not accustomed. Thus, never having learned to lose, winning remains his habit.

A fullback-halfback with the University of Buffalo during his football years Paul, never having wrestled in high school, decided that it was an art that could be mastered the while it might be fun in the trying. He succeeded and now says that it was one of the most satisfying experiences of his life.

Paul Snyder and his wife, Marie, live in Williamsville, N. Y., with their five youngsters. Paul, the third, is ten while the rest — Kathy, 9; Susan, 8; Janet, 5; and Sandra, 3, — swing the balance of Snyder home power to the distaff side.

The new owner of the Braves has tremendous faith in the one-two combination of General Manager Eddie Donovan and Coach Dolph Schayes. Of equal importance is the fact that Snyder knows that in area fans he is dealing with people who have ever conducted themselves with class. They accepted him and his organization in his presentation of the Freezer Queen operation. They will accept him and the Braves' organization in like manner.

All things are relative and class is no exception.

John Galvin

PRESIDENT

It seems only natural that John Galvin should serve the Buffalo Braves as President. After all no man, of any era, has given so much of his devotion, his time, his energy and his intelligence to one community as he has to Buffalo.

Galvin's record of achievement is as impressive as the man himself. He is the former Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chief Executive Officer of the Marine Midland Bank.

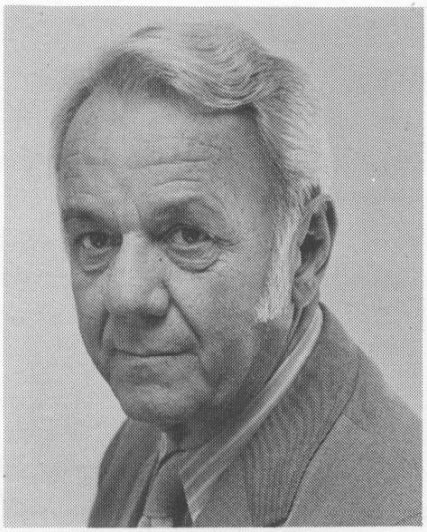

The former two term President of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce serves as a Director of the Wheelabrator Corp., Niagara Frontier Transit Systems, Inc.; Burke Security, Inc.; International Life Insurance Co. of Buffalo and Director and Chairman of the Board of Holding Corp. of Buffalo, and Kissing Bridge Ski Corp.

Active in community affairs, Galvin in Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Rosary Hill College, Buffalo, Member of the Board of Regents of Canisius College and Chairman of the Advisory Board of the Urban Development Corp. of Western New York.

Accepting his position with the Braves Galvin said: "This is an exciting challenge. Buffalo and the entire Western New York area is escalating from a minor sports community to one of major dimensions with the rapidity that is truly remarkable. Here, in one week, the area baptizes not one but two major franchises to walk hand in hand with the Buffalo Bills. The success of these ventures will be assured through leadership and dedication. My aim is to co-ordinate leadership and dedication with the loyalty and enthusiasm of area basketball fans. In such unity will we find the strength which we will so need to ultimately achieve a success that must be ours."

There is a vast difference between a man who lends his name to an organization and a man who lends his energies to an organization. Here is where John Galvin bristles if you even hint that he is President of the Braves only because of his past performance chart in other endeavors. He simply transfers his vigor from his versatile past to spearhead the Braves in their headstrong run to a successful future in the NBA.

John Galvin, and truly, is the difference between figurehead and spearhead, He is, and truly, a basic and deeply dedicated Buffalonian and this is simply another challenge he accepts with no thought of anything but joyous triumph.

Ralph Hubbell

VICE PRESIDENT
in Charge of Public Relations

The Buffalo Braves were fortunate indeed when Ralph Hubbell joined the team in September as the Vice President in Charge of Public Relations.

The native Minnesotan has been a fixture in Western New York sports for over 35 years.

Most Buffalonians will remember Hub for his famed "6:15 Sportscast" which not only brought the latest in sporting news but also a warm message from a sincere guy who devoted his time to serving the public.

In recent years Hub joined the Jockey Club of Ontario as its United States Public Relations Director. This move meant more new friends for the Sport of Kings and lucky paupers.

Hubbell's greatest asset to the Braves Organization has been his sense of organization. The popular Western New York sports figure received more than twenty speaking requests in the first few days after news came about his joining the organization.

Besides being blessed with the gift of speech, Hubbell is more than a capable writer. Weekly he writes a column for the Magnificat — the offical voice of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Buffalo. He also wrote "A Man Remembers" which is his autobiography and also a concise history of sports in Western New York.

A man without an enemy in the world, Hubbell was the right man for the job to spread the word about the Buffalo Braves throughout Western New York.

He is the first to admit that his hobby is children. He and his wife, Ann, welcomed Peter, Philip and Emily Louise into the world — in that order. In time Peter, who is a sportscaster in Jamestown, and his wife, Barbara, added Karen, Peter, Jr., and Jody Ann to the fold the while Phil, with his wife Jayne, presented the Grandparents with Jill and Phil, Jr.

However — these are just Hub's by ownership. He collects youngsters as others gather precious stones, or antiques, or fancy cars. And his philosophy as to why? "Maybe," he will tell you, "it's because I remember that, once upon a time, I was one of these."

Watching him as he enthusiastically goes about his duties you have to believe that he not only was "one of these" he has not lost the art of staying as young as they.

Eddie Donovan

GENERAL MANAGER

Leading the Braves front office is General Manager Eddie Donovan. Recognized by basketball experts as a basketball genius, Eddie came to Buffalo from the New York Knickerbockers where he architected the World Champion team.

Donovan is no stranger to Western New York. He launched his collegiate basketball coaching career at his alma mater St. Bonaventure after an injury in his senior year curtailed his playing career.

After graduating from St. Bonaventure, he served a hitch in the Navy and then returned to Olean, N. Y. to teach mathematics and coach the high school basketball team.

From there his career returned him to St. Bonaventure where he first served as an assistant coach before being elevated to the top post after Eddie Melvin departed to go to Toledo University.

In eight seasons at the Bonnie helm, Donovan posted a 139-57 record. The record included participation in five post-season tournaments and a number two national ranking in 1960.

While at St. Bonaventure Donovan brought the small Catholic college into the basketball limelight — a position that they still occupy. At Bonnie he coached two All-Americans — Tom Stith and Fred Crawford.

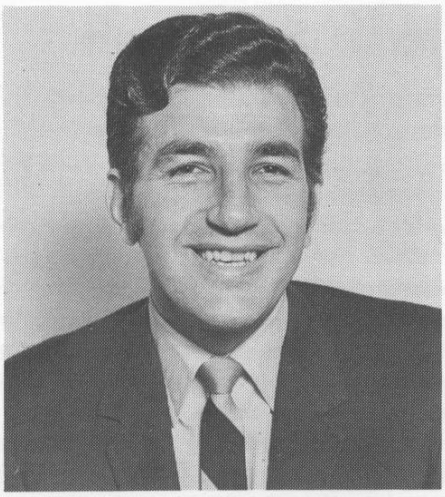

On May 8, 1961 Eddie took over the head coaching job of the New York Knickerbockers. In 1964 he accepted an even greater challenge when he relinquished the coaching reigns to assume the General Manager post of the Gotham club. It was at that time that he instituted the five year program to bring the Knicks to basketball respectability.

Not only did he achieve that goal, but also he helped bring New York its first basketball World Championship before departing the Knicks for the Braves job.

It did not take him too long to get started to make the Braves a contending team. He traded the team's first draft pick to Baltimore for Mike Davis, a member of the league's All-Rookie team, and the Bullets first draft pick.

In the college draft he came up with John Hummer, Cornell Warner and Chip Case. In the NBA Expansion Draft he brought Dick Garrett, Herm Gilliam, George Wilson, Em Bryant Bob Kauffman, Mike Lynn, Paul Long, Don May and Bill Hosket to the Braves to give them a good nucleus of younger NBA players and proven pros.

Donovan resides with his wife Marjorie and their five children in Olean, N. Y.

Dolph Schayes

COACH

Player — Coach — League Administrator — and then Coach again. That's the story of Dolph Schayes, the coach of the Buffalo Braves.

After an outstanding career at New York University where he gained All-American honors, Dolph turned pro with the Syracuse Nationals in 1948.

The Schayes-Syracuse marriage was a good one for both parties. Schayes performed for the Central New York hoopers for 15 years. Twelve of those seasons he was named to either the first or second NBA All-Star team. The ultimate came in 1954-55 when the Nationals won the NBA championship.

When Dolph joined the Nationals they were in the National League. After his successful 1949 debut when he was crowned as the loop's top rookie, the Nationals were invited to join the Basketball Association of America. or the league which immediately predecessed the NBA.

In 1963 the Nationals moved from Syracuse to Philadelphia and Dolph went with them serving as player-coach.

The same success he enjoyed as a player followed him over to the coaching side. His 1965-66 Philadelphia team won 55 games the most the team had ever won up to that time. He was rewarded by being named the Coach of the Year.

In 1967 he added still another conquest to his basketball career when he successfully moved from coaching into the NBA League Office to serve as the Supervisor of Officials.

Schayes' latest move from the league office to the bench of the Buffalo Braves may prove to be his stiffest test so far. Expansion teams usually do not fare too well. However even the sternest basketball critics believe that the Buffalo team might be an exception to the rule especially because of the leadership of Dolph Schayes as coach and Eddie Donovan as General Manager.

Upon the conclusion of his professional career Dolph was the NBA's four all-time rebounder and still ranks in the NBA's top ten in minutes played with 29,800.

His 19,249 points scored makes him the fifth all-time scorer in the NBA history. He also committed 3667 personal fouls and converted 6979 free throws to set still standing NBA records.

Prospectus by Dolph Schayes

"It's great to have this new challenge," says Dolph Schayes, the fifth-leading scorer in National Basketball Association history. Schayes takes over as coach of the fledgling Buffalo Braves brimming with optimism.

"I've always relished the underdog role and I'm really intrigued about being in the position of trying to develop young talent."

For starters, the Braves plucked two guards from the 1969-70 All-Rookie team — Dick Garrett of Los Angeles, who was Jerry West's back court mate last season, and Mike Davis of Baltimore, the front-line reserve behind Earl Monroe and Kevin Loughery.

Garrett averaged 11.6 points for the Lakers and played strong defense. Davis who was traded to the Braves with the Bullets' No. 1 draft pick, averaged 12.0 points and piled up 40 points in one game. He was the Bullets' No. 1 pick in the 1969 draft.

Schayes also has veteran guards Herm Gilliam, Fred Crawford, Emmette Bryant and Paul Long .

At center, there is Nate Bowman, Willis Reed's backup man on the World Champion New York Knicks, and seven-year pro George Wilson of Philadelphia.

John Hummer, a 6-9 forward, was the Braves' No. 1 pick in the 1970 college draft. He averaged 17.5 points for Princeton last year and is also noted for his rebounding ability and defense.

"It's rare that you find a forward with such defensive skills for a boy 6-9 coming into his first year of pro ball," noted Schayes. "He has a definite ability to drive to the hoop and was very impressive in rookie camp with his defense."

Bill Hosket and Don May from New York are aso battling for a berth at forward. So is Bob Kauffman, a 6-8 forward-center, who played for Chicago last year. Cornell Warner, a 6-9 rookie from Jackson State, averaged 22.9 last winter and shows lots of potential.

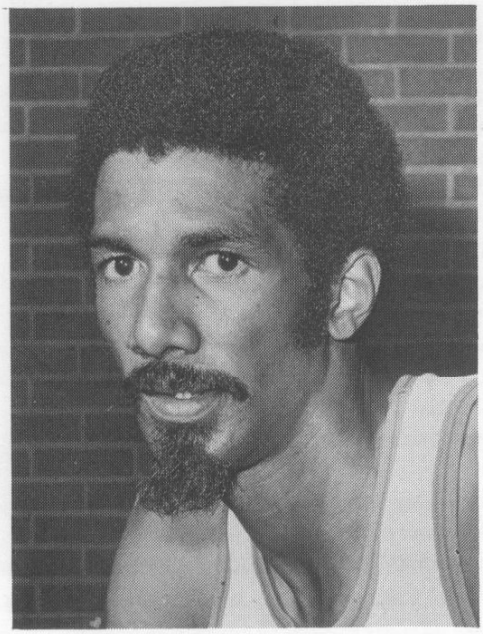

Schayes is returning to coaching after a four-year absence, when he was Coach of the Year at Philadelphia in 1966.
