A HOPEFUL BEGINNING

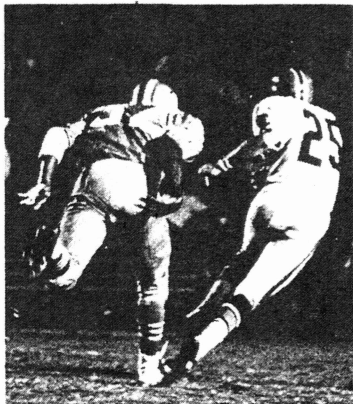

The date June 30, 1965, always will be remembered as both a termination and a commencement in the history of Atlanta sports. For on that day the end came to the many and disparate struggles to place a professional football team in the Southeast's key metropolis. At the same time the Atlanta Falcons were born and began what is expected to be a long and storied tenure in the National Football League.

All that had gone before—the successes (an $18 million stadium to play in) and the near-misses (aborted attempts to place other franchises in the city)—was set aside for the immediate business of fielding a team in little over a year's time.

Prime mover in this task was Rankin Smith, young multi-millionaire insurance executive who has controlling ownership of the Falcons.

Virtually unknown to the general public before that June day a year ago, Smith immediately endeared himself to aficionados of the sport by asking a choice rhetorical question at a press conference following his acquisition of the franchise: "Doesn't every adult male in America want to own his own football team?" Not every adult male American has the wherewithal to swing such a deal, but it was comforting to hear that a man who can afford to pay between eight and nine million dollars for a franchise, as Smith did, is capable of dreams like those of any other guy.

The day's proceedings threw the city into a happy delirium unequalled in the history of football. By the time Smith got back to his insurance office 24 hours later, there had been over 1,000 phone calls for tickets. He had to push his way through stacks of mail. By August, when a contest was completed which resulted in the nickname Falcons, a few of the more avid fans even had come to blows in defense of what they believed their adopted team should be called. By the middle of December, Smith had signed the most coveted college football player in the nation, Texas linebacker Tommy Nobis. By Christmas Eve, when the Falcons cut off a brief 54-day ticket sale requiring almost no promotion, an NFL record had been established for season tickets sold by a new club (45,000).

And in January, Smith surprised the entire athletic fraternity by naming a head coach who never had been mentioned in the perpetual stream of journalistic speculation about the job. But Green Bay Packer assistant Norb Hecker assumed his new post with vigor and immediately embraced the gigantic job of sifting—along with Director of Player Personnel Gene Cronin—a huge list of NFL players made available to the Atlanta expansion team by other teams in the league.

Finally, three men were chosen from each other club and these 42 formed the nucleus of the roster Hecker had to work with when he took the team to summer training camp in Black Mountain, N.C., early in July. Added to this group were the drafted rookies, scores of free agents and a few miscellaneous players obtained in trades. In all, Hecker and his staff were faced with evaluating over 130 men from July to September.

Then, on August 27, in Columbia, S.C., the Falcons recorded their first victory, defeating the San Francisco 49ers, 24-17, in a pre-season game.

The huge void which had been the Southeast without an NFL team was beginning to close. Fans were looking now toward Atlanta. The Falcons expect to be filling that void for a long, long time.

THE PRESIDENT

Rankin McEachern Smith, president of the Atlanta Falcons, was born in Atlanta 42 years ago, his grandfather having been one of the founders of the Life Insurance Company of Georgia. While the insurance business has been the focal point through most of his life, sports always was in his peripheral vision. He participated in athletics as a youngster, developed a lasting devotion to the Bulldogs of the University of Georgia while a student there, and maintained connections with sports in both public and private capacities later on.

He has sustained an interest in spectator sports—particularly football, baseball, basketball and automobile racing—while at the same time participating in sports of the great outdoors—boating, hunting and fishing. A year before he entered the pro football world he brought in a 288-pound blue marlin off the 38-foot yacht he moors in Miami. A special love is bonefishing. He leases property for quail hunting at Waynesboro, Ga., and owns a farm near Athens where he stocks a pond with small game fish.

In 1964, Governor Carl Sanders appointed Smith Fifth District member of the State Game and Fish Commission. He was a pioneer in stocking the Chattahoochee River with trout.

He has been a central figure in several charitable and civic organizations and continues to hold trusteeships in the University of Georgia Foundation, Reinhardt College in Waleska and Atlanta's Lovett School.

Smith himself attended North Fulton High and Marist schools in Atlanta and spent a year at Jacksonville's Bolles School when it was a military academy. It was at Bolles as a 125-pound substitute that Smith developed a love for football.

Smith is now executive vice president of Life of Georgia with responsibility for the sales force, some 3,000 of the company's 4,000 employees.

He is married to the former Meme Wellman of Athens, Ga. They have five children—Rankin, Jr., Taylor, Carroll, Dorothy Ann and Karen.

HEAD COACH

Norb Hecker comes to the Falcons after seven years on Coach Vince Lombardi's staff at Green Bay. As defensive backfield coach, Hecker helped develop all-pro stars Herb Adderley, Willie Wood and Jesse Whittenton.

He served Lombardi through three world championships and four Western Conference titles.

Probably no head coaching job in the history of professional football was surrounded with as much speculation as was Hecker's. From the time President Rankin Smith obtained the Atlanta franchise in June of 1965 there were countless predictions, both in the press and in private, on who would take the coaching reins of the newest team in the National Football League.

Ironically, Hecker's name was not one of those mentioned publicly. He was near the last to be interviewed, and, according to Smith, "one of the most impressive young coaches I have ever met."

Hecker was born on May 26, 1927, in Olmsted Falls, Ohio, where he grew up and attended secondary school. One of his first loves was baseball, but he attended Baldwin-Wallace College at nearby Berea, Ohio, on a basketball scholarship. He was just as proficient in the field events in track and followed his brother Jack's lead by starring in football.

In 1950 Hecker was selected as a Little All-America offensive end at Baldwin-Wallace. He is now in that school's athletic Hall of Fame.

He went on to professional football, first with the Los Angeles Rams, where he played both offensive end and defensive back 1951-53. He went to Toronto of the Canadian Football League in 1954, then to the Washington Redskins. He stayed with Washington through 1957, went to Hamilton of the CFL as a player-coach in 1958 and finally joined Lombardi at Green Bay in 1959.

In 86 NFL games over a six-year period, Hecker intercepted 28 passes.

He and his wife Barbara live in Northeast Atlanta. They have five children—two sons and three daughters.

ASSISTANT COACHES

TOM FEARS—Offensive Coach

PRO CAREER—Outstanding receiver for Los Angeles Rams nine seasons. His NFL record of 18 passes caught in one game still stands. Caught a 73-yard touchdown pass from Norm Van Brocklin for the winning score against Cleveland in 1951 league championship game. Became Vince Lombardi's end coach in 1959 and helped develop Packer Rookie of the Year Boyd Dowler. Went to the Rams' staff for 1960 and 1961 seasons, then rejoined Packers to remain through 1965. Chosen Falcons' coach of offense February 5, 1966.

EXPANSION PROCEEDINGS

Each of the other National Football League teams froze 29 players from its 40-player roster, thereby giving Atlanta 11 players to choose from. Of these, the Falcons chose one player from each team. Then the other 14 teams froze two additional players, leaving eight on each list, from which Atlanta chose two more apiece. This made a total of three choices from each team, or 42 players altogether.

For the 1966 season Atlanta is allowed to carry 46 active players on its roster for the first two weeks of the regular season and 42 thereafter. However, 72 hours in advance of each game the club announces only 40 players who will be eligible for that particular week's contest.

Atlanta also is known as a "swing" team this year, playing each of the other 14 teams in the league once. For records purposes, its won-lost record counts in the Eastern Conference standings.

TRAINING CAMP

It was the longest and largest summer training camp in the history of the National Football League. The Falcons went to their campsite at Black Mountain, N.C., on July 2, but the work actually had begun for some players two weeks earlier in special workouts in Atlanta.

As the Blue Ridge Mountains rang with the sound of the practices, Coach Norb Hecker and his staff honed the unwieldy group to a workable size by the season's beginning. Counting tryouts and other free agents, there were about 130 players processed in the Black Mountain "factory."

Some veterans described the workouts the toughest they had ever been through, but when it was over no one complained that the Falcons weren't in shape. It was a team ready to play.

MASCOT

In the minds of many Atlanta and Southeastern football fans the naming of their new football team became as much a fascination as selecting a coach or players. As soon as Rankin Smith acquired the franchise last year suggestions began pouring in to him.

Finally it was decided that a contest be held to allow the fans to decide by popular response and by the quality of their reasons backing up their suggestions.

Many persons suggested the name Falcons, but a schoolteacher from nearby Griffin, Georgia, Miss Julia Elliott, was selected winner because of her reasons: ". . . the falcon is proud and dignified, with great courage and fight. It never drops its prey. It is deadly and has a great sporting tradition."

Now, at every home game, there are two falcon mascots on perches behind the Atlanta bench. In the 1967 season these birds will be included in special halftime exhibitions. Like their namesakes on the playing field, the falcons are hoping to soar high in the National Football League.

THE PRE-SEASON STORY

Atlanta took its lumps in the pre-season schedule but came out of it with valuable lessons learned and its first victory in history.

On opening night in Atlanta the Falcons kept the Eagles from scoring a touchdown, then had a chance for a game-winning field goal in the last 12 seconds which never got airborne.

Defensive back Ron Smith had the following game with St. Louis tied up 10-10 in the last quarter on his 88-yard punt return before the Cards surged ahead. In the next game, New York at Nashville, Smith again had the game tied on a 68-yard runback of an interception, but the Giants scored once more to win.

The one time Atlanta's defenses let the flood come in was against Cleveland in the final period. The Browns put away 28 points and won, 42-3.

Then, on August 27, in Columbia, S.C., rookie Randy Johnson started his first game at quarterback and tossed a 35-yard scoring pass to Alex Hawkins for the clincher in the Falcons' first victory.

TELEVISION

ED THILENIUS—Television Play-by-Play

Ed Thilenius, a face and voice well-known to Southeastern sports fans for many years, heads the Falcons television broadcasting team with his informed and complete play-by-play accounts.

Thilenius, 41, is familiar as the former "Voice of the Bulldogs" for ten years on University of Georgia football broadcasts. He is still sports director of Atlanta's CBS outlet, WAGA-TV (Channel 5), and is several time winner of the state Sportscaster of the Year award.

JOHNNY SAUER—Television Analyst

Teaming with Ed Thilenius on Atlanta Falcons television broadcasts is Johnny Sauer, who handles the analysis and color reporting portions of the program.

Sauer, 41, formerly starred as a halfback and quarterback for Earl Blaik's West Point teams 1943-45 and recently was named to succeed Otto Graham as coach of the College All-Stars. Sauer was once head coach at The Citadel. He also coached at Army, Florida, and with the Los Angeles Rams.

BROADCAST INFORMATION

Radio—WQXI Atlanta (790) is originating station for Southeastern network of 100 stations broadcasting all games; also hear Falcon Report, Monday-Saturday, WQXI, 6 p.m. and Falcon Kickoff, Sundays, WQXI, 9 a.m.

Television—WAGA-TV Atlanta (Channel 5) originating channel for Southeastern network broadcasting all home games (excluding blackout area of 75-mile radius from Atlanta) and all road games (no blackout); also see Falcons' Roost, "The Norb Hecker Show," Saturdays, WAGA, 5:30 p.m.; and Falcon Hilites, WSB-TV (Channel 2), Thursdays, 7 p.m.

RADIO

JACK HURST—Radio Play-by-Play

The radio voice for all Atlanta Falcons games, both home and away, is Jack Hurst, sports director of Atlanta's WQXI, originating station for the Falcon network.

The 41-year-old Hurst has been a sportscaster for several years and is best known in the Southeastern area for his reporting of Georgia Tech games for six seasons.

There is no blackout of radio in Atlanta and its environs, so Hurst may be heard on home games as well.
