In Gratitude

The Patriots wish to take this opportunity to thank all members of the radio, press, television and other communications media for the invaluable support they have rendered ever since the inception of the American Football League. Without them the present high estate of the league could not have been attained.

Sincerely,

Why Patriots?

The name Patriots was among many selected in 1960 by New England fans. The various names were submitted to a panel of sportswriters and Patriots emerged as the winner. 74 fans had picked Patriots. Phil Bissell of the Boston Globe soon produced the insignia.

A Brief History of the Patriots

The winning of the Eastern Division title for 1963 in the American Football League's first playoff culminated a four-year competitive battle for the Patriots' organization.

However, the 26 to 8 triumph at snowy Buffalo on Dec. 28, 1963 fulfilled a dream of much longer duration.

A professional football team for Boston had been the constant brainchild of Bill Sullivan, Jr., for 10 years before he secured a franchise on November 22, 1959, in the American Football League that was less than three months old at the time.

Sullivan, who had been prominent in sports previously as publicist at Boston College and Notre Dame during the days of Frank Leahy, followed by a term as Public Relations director of the baseball Braves while they were still in Boston, brought nine other prominent New England industrialists and sportsmen into ownership with him.

They were Dom DiMaggio, the ex-Red Sox star; Dan Marr, former co-owner of the Braves; Joseph E. Sullivan, Bill's uncle and well-known printer; Paul Sonnabend of the family behind the Hotel Corporation of America; Edgar L. Turner, president of the Seven-Up Bottling Co. in Greater Boston; Dean Boylan, president of Boston Sand and Gravel Co.; Ed McMann, Maine blueberry packing tycoon; John Ames, Jr., and the late George Sargent, the last two from two of Massachusetts' most famous families.

William Kemble was named a director later to represent some 1600 stockholders who bought non-voting stock after the Patriots pulled another of their firsts by issuing 100,000 shares of stock for public sale.

Only two changes have taken place in the original ownership. Forrester (Tim) Clark, one-time Harvard athlete, bought out Ames and the untimely death of George Sargent saw his brother Francis, present Commissioner of Public Works in Massachusetts, take up George's one-tenth interest.

While they were still struggling to acquire a home field (they finally got Boston University field, which was old Braves Field transformed), the new owners lost no time in getting busy on promotion and personnel.

A contest was held to name the new club and "Patriots" was selected by a panel of Boston sports writers in keeping with the New England heritage. Red, white and blue were naturally selected as the team colors.

The first football expert hired ultimately proved to be the most important one right up to the present writing. He was Michael (Mike) Holovak, who had just completed a nine-year tenure as Head Coach at Boston College. Mike was originally hired by the Patriots as Director of Player Personnel.

Next in line for the front office was the selection of Ed McKeever as General Manager. Ed had a quarter of a century of experience in every phase of football—as a player at Texas Tech; a coach at Boston College, Notre Dame, Cornell, San Francisco and LSU; and a general manager-coach of the Chicago Rockets in the old All-American Conference.

Lou Saban, the first head coach of the Patriots, was a virtual unknown when signed out of Western Illinois, although he once captained the Cleveland Browns.

The front office staff was completed with the appointment of Gerry Moore, veteran Boston sports writer, as Director of Public Relations; John Fitzgerald, former airlines representative, as Ticket Manager; and Miss Joanne Parker as receptionist.

Saban brought most of his staff with him from Western Illinois, added Holovak as offensive backfield coach, and the first Patriots' practice of all time was held, fittingly, on July 4, 1960, on the campus of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

As candidates came and went by the dozens almost daily, a 36-year-old former Canadian League and Greater-Boston sandlot star, Ed (Butch) Songin, outlasted 12 other aspirants to become the quarterback who was to lead the Pats through their first season.

The Patriots added to their list of firsts on July 30, 1960, when, following a night-before parade before 100,000 spectators, they played the first AFL exhibition game in history, beating the favored Bills, 28-7, in a contest witnessed by 16,000 spectators in 90-degree heat.

Keeping up on the firsts, the following August 14 the Pats played the first professional sporting event ever held in the famous Harvard Stadium, losing 24-14 to the Dallas Texans in a charity exhibition tilt, then, on September 9, 1961, at Boston University field the Patriots played the first regular season contest in AFL history. They were upset, 13-10, by the Denver Broncos, before 21,597 fans who welcomed pro football back to Boston after an 11-year absence.

The first edition of the Patriots stayed in contention for the Eastern Division championship for the first 10 games with a 5-5 mark, but dropped its last four games to finish in the AFL cellar.

Linebacker Tom Addison and rookie safetyman Ross O'Hanley were named to the first AFL All-star team, while guard Charlie Leo and defensive end Bob Dee earned spots on the second team.

Another vital development in the history of the Patriots occurred during the off-season when the Boston club acquired the services of quarterback Babe Parilli and fullback Billy Lott from the Oakland Raiders in exchange for halfback Dick Christy, fullback Alan Miller and tackle Hal Smith in what still stands as the biggest AFL trade in its five-year history.

The Patriots got off to a floundering start in 1961 and following the fifth game (2-3) Saban was replaced by Mike Holovak as head coach. The one-time Boston College All-America fullback, a PT-boat hero in World War II and professional star with the Los Angeles Rams and Chicago Bears, was named coach on October 10, 1961.

Under Holovak, the Patriots finished that campaign with a 7-1-1 rush, but the Houston Oilers won their last nine in a row to finish one game ahead of the Pats in the final Eastern Division standings.

Gino Cappelletti became fully established as a split end under Holovak and wound up the 1961 season as the highest scorer in professional football with 147 points.

Holovak also introduced the innovation of alternating quarterbacks Parilli and Songin on each play. This shot-gun system lasted until the last three games of the season when Songin was injured and Babe established himself as the number one QB on the club.

The Patriots landed Charlie Leo on the first official All-League team in 1961 and placed five more—Cappelletti, Addison, Larry Garron, Gerry DeLuca and Dee—on the second team. All except DeLuca of that group appeared in the first All-Star game at San Diego, along with Fred Bruney, who was honored as Co-Capt., and Jim Lee Hunt.

The Patriots switched their training camp to the exclusive Phillips Andover Academy campus. Coach Holovak also added a new coaching staff of Art Spinney, Marion Campbell and Bruney.

By mid-season of 1962 the Patriots were leading the Eastern Division by half a game. They had turned away 10,000 fans for a game with Dallas at B.U. field and Parilli was enroute to his greatest season as a pro.

Then disaster struck. In a game in Houston on November 10 Parilli suffered a broken collarbone and the fortunes of the club were left in the hands of Tommy Yewcic. Babe's understudy had thrown but eight passes in his entire career, and, although he stepped in to do a yeoman's job, the Oilers pulled the game out, 21-17, and went on to win their last four games and the Eastern title for the third year in succession.

The Pats put four players on the All-Star contingent in 1962, Parilli, Addison, Jimmy Colclough and Larry Eisenhower. This quartet was joined by Charlie Long, Dick Klein, Dick Felt and Bruney for the All-Star game at San Diego.

During the 1962-63 off-season, another historical development came about when the Patriots signed to play all but one of their home games at Fenway Park, the home of the Boston Red Sox. Their home opener was played at Boston College Alumni field, thereby completing the cycle whereby the Pats have played at all three Greater-Boston universities with accommodations large enough for them.

After taking their first Eastern Division title, the Patriots ran afoul of the San Diego Chargers in the championship game at San Diego, 51 to 10.

However, no less than 11 Pats remained in San Diego to represent the East coached by Mike Holovak in the annual All-Star classic.

They included unanimous All league selections Tom Addison, Larry Eisenhower, and Houston Antwine. Also Larry Garron, Nick Buoniconti and Billy Neighbors, who were named to some first All-League selections. Rounding out the starry group were Babe Parilli, Gino Cappelletti, Charley Long, Bob Dee and Ron Hall.

Some changes took place in the front office and coaching staff before the 1964 season. Ed McKeever, at his own request, shifted from general manager to director of player personnel. Coach Mike Holovak took on the added duties of General Manager.

The Patriots had their best season record of all time with a 10-3-1 mark but were dethroned as Eastern Division Champions when they lost to Buffalo 24-14 before a record crowd of 38,021 fans in a blizzard at Fenway Park. The Pats still made off with a lion's share of individual honors. Gino Cappelletti was selected unanimously as the American Football League's Most Valuable Player. Babe Parilli was the unanimous choice as All League Quarterback with 3441 yards and 31 touchdown passes. Nick Buoniconti, Larry Eisenhower, and Tom Addison were also All League selections. Joining them at the All-Star game were Bob Dee, Jon Morris, Houston Antwine, and Larry Garron. Ron Hall, Charlie Long and Billy Neighbors also received All-League recognition in polls conducted by the press associations.

Bill Sullivan

PATRIOTS PRESIDENT

By Huck Finnegan

(ED. NOTE—Since the inception of the Patriots Huck Finnegan has been our constant booster. He was the first to predict that the Pats would be an exciting and winning team. His columns in the BOSTON AMERICAN brought wide recognition to the Hearst daily.)

They said it couldn't be done; they said nobody could do it . . . make a pro football team go in Boston, that is.

They pointed to failures of the past, to Bob McKirdy and the Boston Bulldogs of the 1920's; to George Preston Marshall and the Redskins of the 1930's; to Ted Collins, Kate Smith and the Boston Yanks of the 1940's.

They said it couldn't be done, and they had good reason for saying so. George Marshall had said on his departure for Washington that Boston had sold its sports heritage to the mutual machines. Ted Collins, starting in the war year of 1944, had the tide against him from the beginning.

And so, in 1959, when William H. Sullivan, Jr. of Wellesly announced proudly that he had obtained a franchise for Boston in the fledgling American Football League and would field a team in 1960, he seemed to be the only one in town who thought he could make a go of it.

"It's suicide," said the skeptics. "He doesn't have a field, a player, a coach or bankroll. He doesn't even have a name for the club. This venture won't get off the ground. He's up against the same proposition Ted Collins faced, and he doesn't have Collins' money."

They didn't reckon with Sullivan's persistence. He had been brought up under Frank Leahy at Boston College and Notre Dame, and Leahy never settled for a tie. They didn't reckon with Sullivan's salesmanship or prescience or his determination to finish what he started.

The optimistic Mr. Sullivan had a sports background in baseball as well as football. He knew the same pessimistic talk greeted the Boston team in the new American Baseball League in 1901, and he knew it took the AL entry only a few years to take the play away from its Boston rival in the National League, which had started 25 years earlier.

Sullivan and other Patriots fans.

Richard Cardinal Cushing boosts the Patriots.

Coach Richardson, Bill Sullivan and Jack Rudolph.

He had done much to restore the balance of power when he was information director of the Braves in the '40's. His brochure on Bob Elliot brought the Braves' third baseman selection as the league's Most Valuable Player in 1947. He helped the Braves set an attendance record when they won the NL pennant in 1948.

He did more than that. With the help of broadcaster Jim Britt, he established the Jimmy Fund for cancer research which today is New England's leading charity. He was a doer, and he was forever looking up. He left the Braves for greener pastures (he now is president of Metropolitan Petroleum Co.) and it may be coincidence but the Braves went downhill so fast thereafter, that they were in Milwaukee in 1953.

But this was football, Sullivan's passion. He had been a student of the game since childhood. He knew that the failures of both Redskins and Yanks were due mainly to their lack of a passer, a Sammy Baugh or a Sid Luckman. The world might have beaten a path to a fellow's door in days of yore when he built a better mousetrap, but more than the mousetrap, play was needed to get the halfbacks beyond the line of scrimmage in this day of shifting defenses and mobile line behemoths.

He started digging. He brought in Ed McKeever, another Leahy man, as general manager, Lou Saban as coach, and he hired Mike Holovak as scout. He formed a syndicate of ten to furnish the do-re-mi, and later on when expenses mounted, he sold stock in the club at $5 a share. He oozed ideas, and his optimism remained constant. Climax to all the spade-work came in a press conference at Mayor Collins' office where it was announced that Boston University had opened its gates (old Braves Field) to the Patriots with the proviso that they spend their own money to make the necessary improvements. Then the aggressive Mr. Sullivan made arrangements to have the team train at University of Massachusetts, and the Patriots were in business.

It couldn't be done they kept saying, but he did it.

All was not clover that first year. Braves (BU) Field was built in the street car era of 1915, and there were no provisions for parking. And the cost of renovating field and stands was prohibitive. Thus the Patriots lost $600,000 their first year (1960) and skeptics said, "They won't be around next season."

They were, and they cut their losses in half. Now $900,000 is a lot of money to lose in two years, but Sullivan, as usual saw the silver lining. First, the Patriots had obtained quarterback Babe Parilli from Oakland, and they had replaced Saban with Holovak who finished the season with a 6-1-1 record. There was no place to go but up in Sullivan's thinking, and when one of the discouraged owners defected he was replaced by Forrester (Tim) Clark, Harvard '29, a football enthusiast of the highest degree who, usually had a few bucks to spare.

Turning point in AFL fortunes came in the spring of 1962 when the owners met in convention at Hotel Kenmore. Representatives from Atlanta, New Orleans and Kansas City posted $25,000 in attempts to land a franchise; so confident were they of the league's success. Gillette took over the TV sponsorships which would reduce the club's losses appreciably, and in the fall the club was permitted to play a nationally televised game with Houston in Harvard stadium.

Recently, a bunch of the boys were discussing the Patriot's rise, and they attributed it to (1) acquisition of Babe Parilli; (2) replacement of Lou Saban with Mike Holovak as coach; (3) TV money; and (4) shift to Fenway Park.

Not one mentioned the determination of the eternal optimist, William H. Sullivan, Jr., club president. Not one mentioned the man who held the club together through all the vicissitudes of 1960 and 1961. There isn't another man in the state who would have tackled the job.

Sullivan made pro football go in Boston where money men like George Preston Marshall and Ted Collins couldn't. He knew he had something the public wanted, and it was just a question of time until he could give them the finished product.

He has it now, and don't be surprised if his Patriots' are playing in a 50,000 seat stadium before long. He's chairman of the stadium commission, you know, and under his guidance the "Impossibles" get done, but they just take a little longer than the tasks that are marked "Difficult."

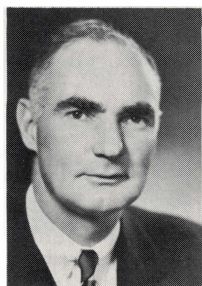

Officers

Dan Marr, vice president

Colonel Marr has been a football player and fan all his life. He was a stockholder of the Boston Braves and played for the Pere Marquettes — a famed semi-pro football team from South Boston that played in the home of the Patriots—Fenway Park. As John Ahern of the Globe pointed out in an article on Danny—the Colonel doesn't pick losers. His company, Daniel Marr and Sons is one of the nation's leaders in steel erection. A stalwart member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Dan makes most of the trips with the club. During his spare time he serves as commissioner of the New England Football League.

Dan Marr

Forrester A. "Tim" Clark, v.p.

Tim Clark succeeded John Ames as an owner of the Patriots. A Harvard alumnus, Tim still remains in the best of condition. He keeps himself in shape by working on his Hamilton, Mass. farm and by vigorous physical exercise. Tim has enjoyed a great deal of success in his various business ventures which include Clark and White Lincoln Mercury, Wainwright and Company, and the Wildcat Ski Area.

Edgar L. Turner, Treasurer

Ed Turner is a graduate of Medford High and Boston University. He is the President of Seven-Up Bottling Company of Boston as well as being the Pats' financial man. Ed also owns and operates several Howard Johnson Restaurants. For twenty-six years Turner has been a very active member in Shrine activities.

Mike Holovak

PATRIOTS COACH

The familiar accolade of "Give It To Mike," which has been associated with Mike Holovak around Boston for more than a quarter of a century, took on a new meaning at the close of the 1964 American Football League season when he was awarded a new five-year contract as General Manager and Head Coach of the Patriots.

Although the Pats grudgingly yielded their Eastern Division title to Buffalo in the final game, they compiled their very best season's record of 10-3-1, thus boosting Mike's AFL career mark, which leads all the rest, to 33-14-4.

This performance followed on the heels of what many observers still feel was Mike's outstanding coaching job in a distinguished career in leading the Pats to their divisional crown in 1963.

Faced with the loss of Ron Burton and Don Webb before the season even started and handicapped further by a stream of problems throughout the campaign, he kept the team together until it finally prevailed in the AFL's only playoff to date—a 26 to 8 triumph at Buffalo.

Yet, neither that achievement nor the spectacular events of last Fall have completely satisfied the retiring, soft-spoken man himself. Nor will he be entirely happy until the Patriots have gone all the way to the Championship flag.

This dedication and determination typifies the entire life of the now 45-year-old Holovak, who lost little time making his presence felt after he first appeared on the Boston College campus in the fall of 1939 as the proverbial "poor boy" from Lansford, Pennsylvania.

As a sophomore, Mike scaled the football heights for the first time when he was a 60-minute fullback on Frank Leahy's undefeated B.C. squad that won the National championship by downing Tennessee, 19 to 13, in the Sugar Bowl, January 1, 1941.

En route to this climax, Mike played 60 minutes during a 19 to 18 triumph over Georgetown at the same Fenway Park where the Patriots now play their home games. That particular contest was described by the late and great Grantland Rice as the "greatest college football game ever played."

The popular expression of "Give It To Mike" came into being during the 1942 season of mixed emotions when Holovak and Freddy Nаметz co-captained a squad for the late Denny Meyers that ran roughshod over everybody until the still unbelievable 55 to 12 shellacking from arch rival Holy Cross in the final regular season engagement.

During his undergraduate days at Boston College were born the first seeds of associations that led to Mike's being tapped as chief strategist of the Pats many years later.

The then Lowell, Mass., home of Billy Sullivan, B.C. publicist at the time and now founder and president of Boston's professionals, was among the first where young Holovak had dinner away from the Chestnut Hill campus.

He was graduated in March, 1943 in the stepped-up program of that era and immediately enlisted in the Navy. Typical of his entire career, he chose the dangerous PT service. It is only from his shipmates that one learns about the valiant service he rendered to his country while serving in the South Pacific.

Following his separation from the Navy, Mike played one season with the Los Angeles Rams and two seasons with the Chicago Bears. He was remembered with such affection by Windy City NFL followers that when he was appointed head coach of the Patriots on October 10, 1961, one Chicago paper ran an eight-column headline: "Ex-Bear Holovak is new coach of the Patriots."

After three years as a professional came the call to the coaching ranks from his Alma Mater, first as freshman tutor and then for nine years as a varsity mentor, the longest skein of a head coach in B.C. history.

During that stretch, he compiled a 49-29-3 record with squads that often were so thin that Mike had to convert a host of players into strange positions.

He was the first executive signed by the newly-born Patriots in December 1959 when he became director of player personnel. After Lou Saban became the first head coach, Holovak took on the added duties as offensive backfield coach.

Mike immediately steered his charges to a 7-1-1 mark for the rest of the campaign and finished one game back of the champion Houston Oilers.

The 1962 season was almost a duplicate with the Patriots finishing 9-4-1 and were a half game behind the repeating Oilers going into the final weekend. A Houston victory on Saturday in New York ended the Patriots' hopes.

By Gerry Moore

Patriots' Assistant Coaches

ART SPINNEY

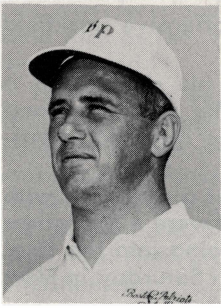

Art Spinney came home to the scene of his early football triumphs to take over as offensive line coach of the Patriots starting with the 1962 season.

At high school in his native Saugus, Mass. and later at Boston College, Art won just about all the honors that were available to a two-way end in those years.

Following his graduation from B.C., in 1950, he joined the Baltimore Colts as an end, but the Army derailed him for the next two years. He returned to the Colts in 1953 and it was then that Weeb Ewbank, present coach of the New York Jets, converted Art into an offensive guard and a brilliant pro career.

Art himself decided when his active career was at a close. He launched his coaching career as an assistant to Ernie Hefferle at B.C. in 1961.

When he became available the following year, Mike Holovak lost no time in bringing Art's vigor and dedication to the Patriots.

CHARLES WEBER

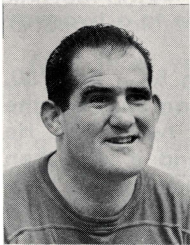

The defensive backfield coach of the Boston Patriots is Charles (Chuck) Weber, 34-year-old former key defensive star with two championship teams.

Weber, who is a native of Philadelphia, was a rookie defensive end when the Cleveland Browns won the National Football League title in 1955 and called the defensive signals from his middle guard berth for the Eagles when the latter took the N.F.L. crown in 1960.

In between times, Chuck played outside linebacker and served as defensive captain for the now St. Louis Cardinals.

Jesse Richardson, the Patriots defensive line coach, was among the highest in recommending the new coach to Holovak.

Chuck is married to the former Virginia Irvin Tiley and they are the parents of Charles 6, Wayne 4 and Tracey 2.

JESSE RICHARDSON

Big Jess began playing football before Jon Morris and J. D. Garrett had seen the light of day . . . For nine years "Marlon" as he was called by his team-mates starred for the Philadelphia Eagles . . . He played three years with the Patriots . . . All NFL selection in '59 and '60 Jess was the main reason the Eagles won the championship . . . The last pro in either league to play without a face mask, Jess engendered more enthusiasm on the playing field than the most eager rookie . . . During the off season the affable Philadelphian is an electronics executive.

When Carl Tasseff left the Pats, Mike Holovak moved Chuck Weber to the defensive backfield and asked Jess if he wanted to coach the defensive line. "It took me about two seconds to say yes" said big Jess.

GERRY MOORE
Director of Public Relations

ED. NOTE: (The information below contains excerpts from a column by John Gillooly at the Boston Record American. Although the column was written five years ago its message is still as pertinent now as it was then. Gerry Moore has helped the Patriots become an integral part of the Boston scene in these five years.)

He's a bit shy of six feet tall and he weighs less than 190 pounds but the Patriots yesterday signed on a man who can be of as much value to them as Gone Ron Burton, the back you see now and next see in the end zone.

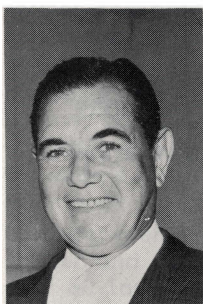

The name is Gerry Moore and yesterday he was appointed director of public relations by Patriots president Billy Sullivan, who didn't wait ten days choosing his pitchman. It was Moore from the start. No one else was considered for the tub on which Moore will thump out rhythmic and expert releases.

Moore Has The Background

But I, for one, consider the Patriots downright lucky to be able to have a man of Moore's competence available. You don't find Moores too frequently. Here's the perfect prefabricated press-agent, with all the skills and the shining personality.

"I did some thinking about it, sure," said Moore, press secretary to Lt. Gov. Bob Murphy for the past three years and in a good position under the golden dome. "But I was in newspaper and associated businesses for 26 years and my enthusiasm for sports never did rub off. This is like coming home. This could be the most fantastic sports story of our time—the development of the Boston team in the American Football League and I'm fascinated to be playing a part in it."

ED McKEEVER
Director of Player Personnel

A native of Texas, Ed starred as a quarterback in his undergraduate days at Texas Tech. Since joining the Patriots five years ago, he was honored as Texas Tech's outstanding athlete of the past 25 years.

He entered the coaching profession and made his first appearance in Boston simultaneously, serving as backfield coach under Frank Leahy with the Boston College Cotton Bowl and Sugar Bowl teams of 1939 and 1940. The latter squad won the national championship by beating Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl.

Ed accompanied Leahy to Notre Dame the following year and when Frank entered the service in mid-1943, McKeever took over as head coach through 1944. During that stretch, the Irish enjoyed a 12-2 record.

He entered the professional ranks for the first time in 1948 as both general manager and head coach of the Chicago Rockets in the All-American Conference.

Ed served for four years as General Manager of the Pats before requesting his present assignment.

JOHN FITZGERALD

Business Manager

If you drive through Kenmore Square late at night and notice the lights in the Patriots office burning brightly, chances are that John J. Fitzgerald, affable Business Manager of the Patriots is hard at work.

After six years of Navy Blue, John donned the red, white and blue for the first time with United Air Lines.

In October of 1959 the Buffalo Bills gained a franchise in the infant American Football League. Fitz was among the leading contenders for the job of Ticket Manager with the Bills. He called his old friend, Bill Sullivan, for a letter of recommendation and Bill suggested that Fitz wait a week. In that week the Pats became the eighth member to join the American Football League. John Fitzgerald donned the red, white, and blue a second time as he was the first person to be hired by the new Boston club. Initially Fitz handled the tickets, but now he is in charge of much of the other business of the club.

CHARLES OLIVIERO

Director of Promotions

This is Charlie's rookie season with the Boston eleven. A native of Everett, Charlie attended B.U. and the Mass. School of Practical Art. He has been in the printing and advertising business for the past 15 years. Charlie handles all the group ticket sales for the Patriots and works in close coordination with Publicist Gerry Moore on all of the Patriot banquet and promotional programs. He serves as advisor to many players, and arranges for personal appearances.

WILLIAM FINUCANE
General Counsel

Bill Finucane has served as counsel to the club since its inception.

It seems safe to say that he probably has prepared more contracts over the past few years than many lawyers will handle in a lifetime. For example, in the first year of the Patriots' existence approximately 200 players passed through the mill including those at the tryout camp and at the regular training session at the University of Massachusetts. All had to be protected either with the standard player contract once they actually signed, or with a provisional document during the try-out periods.

In the legislation governing the American Football League recommendations from the desk of William Finucane have been adopted by other clubs and served as tremendous testimony to the wisdom of this attorney who has often consulted with leading lawyers throughout the nation representing the owners of the other clubs in the A.F.L. circuit.

DR. JOSEPH DORGAN

Team Surgeon

Dr. Joe was born in Lawrence, educated in Lowell, and now lives in Belmont . . . has been with the Pats since the beginning . . . performed disc operation on Ron Burton in 1963 and Ron played 3 months later, a record in pro sports . . . a graduate of Holy Cross (Class of 1941)), Joe also attended Tufts Medical where he now teaches.

He is a member of the staffs of Boston City Hospital, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, and Cambridge City Hospital . . . He is Chief of Orthopedic Surgery at the Malden City Hospital . . . Joe and his wife Mary have three children, Joannie 20, Barbara 17, and Mary Anne 14 . . . The Patriots feel fortunate to have one of the foremost surgeons on their team.

PETER C. SIRAGUSA

Musical Director

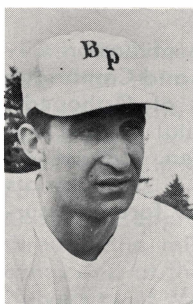

Ever since the spectacular pre-game and half-time presentations that went with the Patriots' triumph over the champion Oilers in the Harvard Stadium, people have been asking who organized the musical end of that program.

The answer is 35-year-old Peter Siragusa, a native of Belmont, who now resides in Brighton with his wife, the former Gloria Assanti of Arlington, and their five children, Francis 12, Stephanie 10, Peter, Jr. 8, Mark 7, and Gloria 5.

He is the same fellow who arranges the schedule of bands for the Patriots' contests at Fenway Park.

In addition to serving as Director of Entertainment for the Pats, Peter is Director of the Boston College and Boston Fire Department bands and is a member of the Music Department in the Boston Public Schools.

JOHN BIRCH . . . ticket assistant. John was the first to buy a Patriots season ticket in 1959. He became friends with Pats' ticket boss John Fitzgerald and Fitz later hired the affable Belmont native.

WILLIAM T. BATES
Trainer

William T. Bates was named trainer of the Boston Patriots in June of 1961. Bill fought in the Korean War in the front lines. He returned to the states and studied Biology and Physical Therapy at the University of Pennsylvania. He started assisting in the training room at Penn and eventually became the visiting trainer for the Philadelphia Eagles as assistant trainer.

Last Winter Bates served as trainer for the N.B.A. All Stars on their European tour for the State Department. When injuries paralyzed the U.S. quintet, Bates was called onto the court and played a major part in the U.S. victory in Belgrade.

RALPH DELLO RUSSO
Equipment Manager

The most eligible bachelor of the Boston Patriots is not Art Graham. He is the man who keeps the Pats going—Ralph Dello Russo. This year marks Ralph's sixth year with the Patriots and his twenty-third in the equipment business. During his six-year tenure he has outfitted more than seven hundred aspirants to the Red, White, and Blue.

As soon as the war was over he applied for the equipment manager's job at Boston College. He won the job and for seventeen years served the Eagles in every sport.

In 1949 Mike Holovak became Freshman Coach of the Eagles and immediately a strong friendship developed between the husky Polish Pennsylvanian and the stocky Italian. When Mike joined the Pats in their first year, Ralph followed after him.

PHILLIPS ACADEMY, ANDOVER, MASS.

The Boston Patriots have the good fortune to train at the famed Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass. The surroundings are rustic and academic. The people on the Andover staff have made every possible effort to assure the Patriots that they are welcome. The facilities are the best, from the seven football fields, to the Isometric Room, to the swimming pool.

Steve Sorota, the head coach of football at the school, also supervises the Patriots Isometric Program. Sorota is an alumnus of Fordham and his watchful guidance of the Pats has produced a great increase in the strength of the club.

Ted Harrison and Frank Buchan of the Academy staff have arranged a training camp that is second to none.

Boston Patriots

1776 Club

Probably the most enthusiastic group of fans that can be found anywhere in the American Football League are the members of the 1776 Club of the Boston Patriots. This Club was founded at the beginning of the 1962 season by a small group of avid fans headed by John F. Gildea, a Greater Boston businessman. Meetings were held in the early part of June, and invitations to join were sent out to season ticket holders. A tremendous turnout came to the first meeting, and plans were formulated for the season. Various club members have been responsible for the large number of season ticket sales.

At the start of each training season, the 1776 Club sponsors a Family Day Barbecue at the Andover training camp. At this time, the coaches introduce the new players to the fans. Various contests are run off. These contests consists of running, passing, and kicking and the 1776 Club awards prizes to the winners.

When the football team leaves on a trip, there are members of the 1776 Club at the airport to give them a sendoff. And when the team returns after a trip, there are 1776ers at the airport to welcome them home no matter what the hour.

The Club also sponsors a dinner which kick-offs the season, and quarterback luncheons where prizes are given to the offensive and defensive players of the week.

This year's officers are:

Frank Kelley	President
Dick Gildea	Vice-President
Herb Bortman	Treasurer
Keene Annis	Secretary

Frank Kelley has been active on the Boston sports scene since 1946 when he served as bat boy for the champion Red Sox. A protege of Tom Yawkey Frank attended Boston University and now resides in Norwood with his wife Dorothy and their three children.

PATRIOT NICKNAMES

The Boston Patriots possess an array of very interesting nicknames. Houston Antwine was dubbed Twine by his college coach because the coach had a great deal of difficulty pronouncing Antwine. "Bubba" Dee was given his nickname by his high school coach, Tom McCann and the name has remained with the Braintree native ever since.

When Larry Eisenhower was a young boy his father called him "Ike" as it was easier to pronounce than Eisenhower. J. D. Garret is the real name of the Natchitoches flash, but his brothers and sisters called him D.D. as the J. was hard to say. When it came to high school diploma time, J.D.'s professor wrote James Davis Garrett on the document. Years later Ed McKeever nicknamed J.D. "Red River" because a Louisiana river of that name runs near J.D.'s home.

Larry Garron was named "Pierre" by his Patriot teammates the first year the Pats were in business. The name springs from the fact that Garron is a French name. Larry Eisenhower was the inventor in Ron Hall's case. Ike was the first to call Ron "Haystacks" as a result of Ron's residence in Missouri. Jimmie Lee Hunt has two nicknames both of which had their origin with Pats' voice, Bob Gallagher. Jim Lee is called "Pickles" because he worked while at Prairie View A&M as a pickle packer at the Prairie View pickle packing plant. Jim is also well known as Earthquake because when he walks tremors often occur. Bob Gallagher also nicknamed Charles Long as "Choo-Choo."

Billy Neighbors is the only Pat whose name springs from a cartoon character. Will is known as "Spanky" because of his close resemblance to Spanky McFarland of the Our Gang series. Vito Parilli has been known as Babe since his adolescent years. Nick Buoniconti was called "Skip" as a youth because his aunt felt that Nicholas was too old a name for such a young lad. Jack Rudolph and Harry Jagielski were the first to address Gino Cappelletti as "Duke" because of the Minnesota product's impeccable attire. Patriot teammates Ross O'Hanley and Ron Hall were responsible for Jimmy Colclough's nickname of "Coleslaw."

Joe Bellino is known as "little" by the veterans and "Swabie" by the rookies. Chuck Shonta is known as "Tonto" because of his Indian ancestry. Ancestry was also the primary factor in the nickname of another Patriot veteran. The name is "Comrade" and the veteran is Tom Yewcic.

New Stadium Finally on Launching Pad

By LOU CONNELLY

Courtesy of the Boston Herald

It just had to be one of the biggest days in the life of that indefatigable Boston sportsman, Billy Sullivan, yesterday. He was pinching himself and finding out that the glamorous dream of the Greater Boston Stadium Authority was slowly approaching reality.

Sullivan was presiding throughout the day at the Hotel Somerset at the unveiling of the Authority's plan for an $80-million sports complex in the South Station area and giving the good news that he and associates Bob Jenney, Msgr. George Kerr and John Leahy, Jr., had been waiting to deliver.

Yawkey, Adams Approve

Gov. Volpe was there hailing the plan as a major step toward creation of a new Boston, and Dick O'Connell, vice-president of the Red Sox, was present for the noon luncheon, bringing the approval of Tom Yawkey. There were assurances from Weston Adams that Boston Garden sporting events would be transferred to the proposed 18,000 seat sports arena.

It's still maybe several years away and there are some imponderables, such as acquisition of some 45 acres of land the Boston Redevelopment Authority is seeking and a word from Mayor Collins, but as Sullivan remarked yesterday, "We're on the launching pad . . ."

There were telegrams from Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey and from Bob Cousy in Honolulu hailing the plan and an announcement from Edward F. Wrightsman of the brokerage firm of Bache & Co., Inc., New York, that the project was "a feasible one" and that Bache would underwrite the project.

The project must be a two-phase one with a 5400-car garage and the sports arena to be built first to help carry the financial load. "Without the garage and arena, the stadium will never come to be," Sullivan reported.

Only One of Its Kind

The all-weather stadium with its retractable roof and 360-foot opening is the eye-catcher. Architect Vincent G. Kling described it as he showed the model on film to the gathering. The stadium, which will seat 53,000 for football and 45,000 for baseball, will be 220 feet high (about 22 stories). You could stretch the Prudential building across it. The building will have a 760-foot diameter. The seating area will have a permanent cover.

The retractable roof, made up of aluminum sections, is designed to open and close in 20 minutes some 220 feet above the playing field and there will be a television camera site for overhead shots. The retractable roof will be the only one of its kind in the world. There also will be two movable sections of 5500 seats for football and baseball.

In addition to the 5400-car garage, there will be another garage under the pedestrian plaza surrounding the stadium, which will accommodate 2500 cars. The plaza will include a pool for ice skating. A ramp crossing the Fort Point Channel will link the stadium, plaza and arena with the garage area.

Naturally, the Red Sox tenancy at the new stadium will be paramount. The Sox will be anxious to know the cost of such matters as rental, but Sullivan feels that if a National Football League entry came to Boston it could reduce the Red Sox rental. Sullivan welcomed the thought of an N.F.L. team in Boston yesterday.

Sullivan, as his record shows, is a man of action and he has advice for the pessimists. "Doubting Thomases, of which this section has more than its share, and negative thinkers who say it can't be done, haven't met this team and don't know what we can do," he said. "Think big—it takes no longer to think big," the Patriots' boss advised.

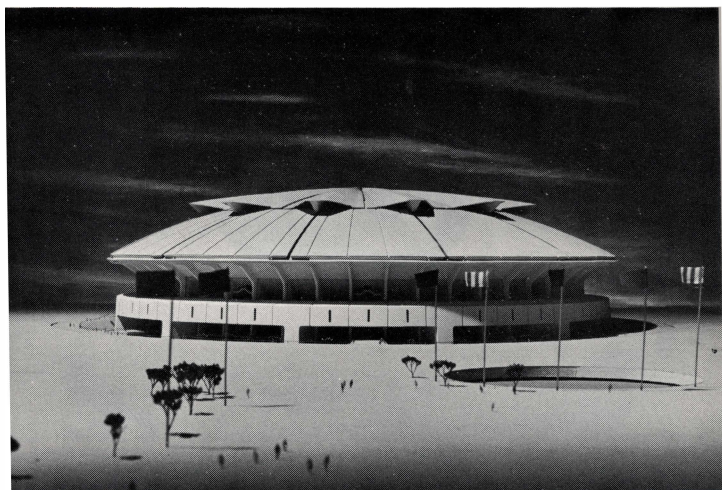

Doubters Are Scored

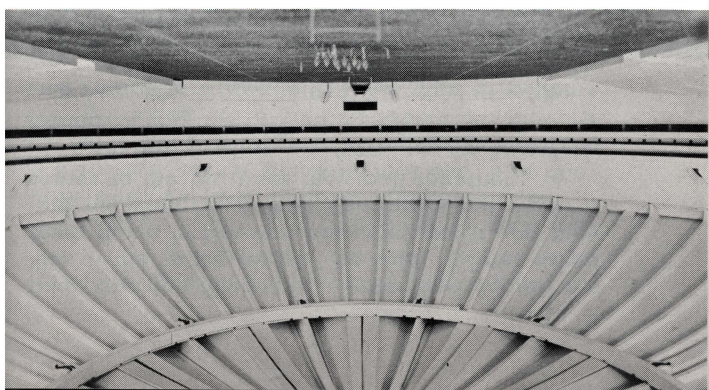

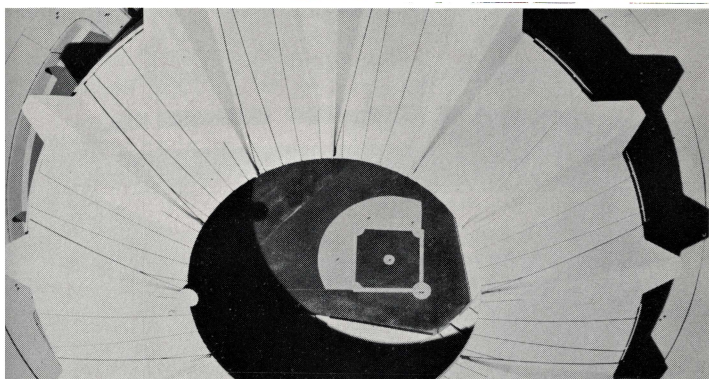

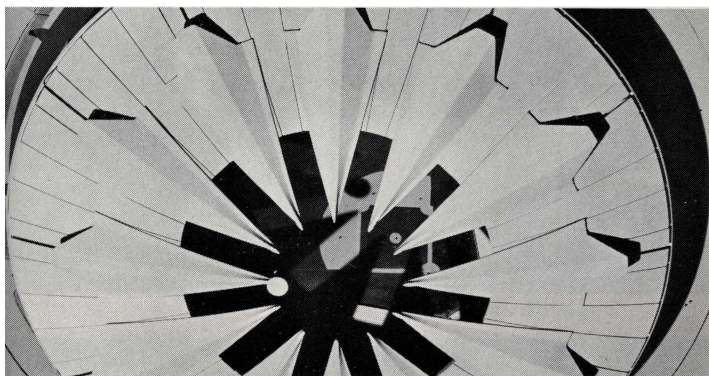

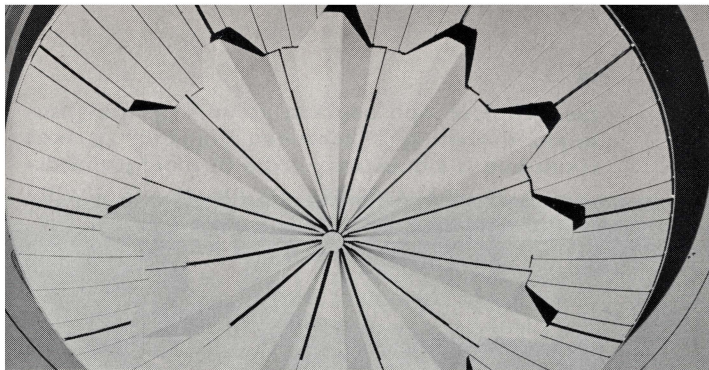

And Jenney, president of the service station chain and a staunch advocate of mass transportation despite this, seconded Sullivan. "It was the doubters who delayed Route 128, the Turnpike, and the Prudential Center and caused the loss of the space center," he said. "I later asked them down in Houston how they got it and they told me they have their squabbles but when it comes to the big ones they pull together.

"And that's what we have to do here," he added.

It's hard to argue with these men of action.

HISTORY OF BOSTON PRO FOOTBALL

BULLDOGS I—Operated by Bob McKirdy one year, 1926. Coached by Herb Treat. Cy Wentworth a star. Played Fenway Park. Lost games and money.

BULLDOGS II—Pottsville, Pa., Maroons moved here by Kenneally, backed by Eddie Morris, stock broker and noted scoreboard wig-wagger at Harvard Stadium; 4-4 record in National Football League. Folded when Morris folded in stock crash. "A great little guy from Southie," Kenneally of Morris.

REDSKINS—1932-36; five-year record: 24-28-5. George Marshall made deal with Kenneally, who still owned Pottsville franchise in N.F.L. Started as Braves at Braves Field, then Redskins at Fenway Park, 1933. Lost $85,000. Memory: Marshall pleading with fans to return ball kicked into stands. Jumped prices with no announcement 1936, souring fans, then moved to Washington just as team got good. Battles, Pincert, Edwards, Lone Star Dietz.

SHAMROCKS—1936-38. First backer Paul Thurlow; Kenneally coach. Won title first year American Football League. Good team, weak league. Played first night game, first all-star game in New England. Signed Larry Kelley (Yale), Giants recalcitrant, but he was lured away before playing. Club hurt by Sept. 21, 1938, hurricane. Finished barnstorming. Star: Hank Soar. Played Fenway.

BEARS—1940. Sheldon Fairbanks promoter, Eddie Casey coach, Kenneally general manager. Played Fenway. In American Conference. Vito Ananis, Andy Farkas, Vic Obeck. Not enough interest.

YANKS—1944-48: 14-38-3. Ted Collins, Kate Smith, Bill Shea, Herb Kopf. Lost $700,000 five years, said Collins. Not one winning season. Moved to New York as Bulldogs. Flopped.

Patriots Basketball Team

The Boston Patriots Basketball Team was organized in 1964 by Pats' Publicist Gerry Moore who serves as General Manager of the quintet.

The squad features Art Graham, Tom Yewcic, Gino Cappelletti, Houston Antwine, Don McKinnon, Bob Dee, Tom Stephens, Babe Parilli, Ron Burton, Ross O'Hanley, Jim Colclough, Nick Buoniconti, and Charley Long. Assistant General Manager is George Luongo.

H. P. Hood and Sons sponsored the team through the kindness of Tom Feenan, who is director of Hood's program for youth fitness.

Larry Garron was coach of the club which soon became tops on the New England Semi-Pro circuit. From the isle of Nantucket to Stonington, Conn. the Patriots basketball team set attendance records. The record of the club was 15-10.

The Hecht House in Boston, and auditoria in Pepperell, Randolph, Bourne, Lynn, in Massachusetts as well as arenas in Franklin, Laconia, and Concord, New Hampshire hosted standing room only crowds as the Patriots explosive brand of football was carried between the hoops.

Any one wishing to challenge the Pats should phone Gerry Moore at CO 2-1776.

1964 BOSTON PATRIOTS

The Season at a Glance

SEPTEMBER 13, 1964

at OAKLAND

Patriots 17—Raiders 14 (21,126)

Season opened in Oakland as the Pats squeezed by the Raiders . . . Art Graham was game's hero, as he caught Hoot Gibson from behind on a punt return . . . Graham's drive and determination prevented the Oakland speedster from scoring . . . Graham also caught a Parilli pass on a 70-yard TD play . . . Tony Romeo also scored on a 19-yard TD toss . . . Cappy kicked a 48-yard field goal to put the Bostonians ahead 17-7, and despite a Raider TD by Art Powell, the lead held. Tonto Shonta won the game ball . . . Mike Dukes made an impressive debut in his first game in the Red, White and Blue.

SEPTEMBER 20, 1964

at SAN DIEGO

Patriots 33—Chargers 28 (20,568)

The unbelievable Gino Cappelletti scored 21 points as he kicked field goals of 41, 32, 37 and 37 yards . . . Haystacks Hall grabbed 3 interceptions, the last one a game saver with 1:12 left to play . . . Art Graham caught Lance Alworth from behind on a punt return . . . Newcomer Mike Dukes twice came up with significant fumble recoveries . . . Mike Holovak's comment, "I'm glad that's over" . . . Ron Hall won the game ball.

SEPTEMBER 27, 1964

at BOSTON

Boston College Stadium

Patriots 26—Jets 10 (22,716)

Defense connected for six interceptions and tied a club mark in doing so, as the rough and ready Pats dumped the undefeated Jets over National TV . . . The sweet Kentucky Babe hit for 13 out of 34 passes, two to Ron Burton and Jim Colclough of 59 yards each . . . Cappy connected for four of 42, 26, 41 and 42 yards. Ron Hall grabbed his 4th and 5th interceptions of the season . . . Houston Antwine won the game ball.

OCTOBER 4, 1964

at DENVER

Patriots 39—Broncos 10 (15,485)

It was Gino Cappelletti Day in Denver as the amazing Duke broke an All-Pro record by kicking 6 field goals . . . Cappy's payoff kicks were 11, 30, 16, 47, 15 and 17 yards each . . . Ron Burton flashed the form which earned him All-American honors at Northwestern with 2 touchdowns, one on a pass and the other on a run . . . Rookie J. D. Garrett ran like a scared rabbit as he galloped 42 yards for the final Patriot six pointer . . . and the rugged veteran Bob Dee blocked a Denver punt to give the Pats victory.

OCTOBER 9, 1964

at BOSTON

Patriots 17—Chargers 26 (35,096)

A record crowd saw the undefeated Patriots meet the San Diego Chargers . . . The weather was fair, but the Chargers weren't as they gave the Pats their first loss of the '64 campaign before the home fans . . . The San Diego passing duo of Hadl and Alworth combined for 124 yards and two TD's . . . Bright spots in the Boston attack were Art Graham and Gino Cappelletti with 6 receptions each . . . Nick Buoniconti played one of his greatest games with 8 unassisted tackles . . . Houston Antwine, Dave Watson and Bob Yates recovered fumbles.

OCTOBER 16, 1964

at BOSTON

Patriots 43—Raiders 43 (23,279)

In a game which Record-American sportswriter, John Gillooly, hailed as the Pats' proudest hour, Babe Parilli, with but one minute remaining, passed a 30-yarder to Jim Colclough . . . Jimmy hopped down the sidelines and when trapped lateralled to Gino Cappelletti who in turn galloped for 15 yards before lateralling another to Ron Burton . . . The 1776 Club named Jimmy Lee "Earthquake" Hunt as the outstanding defensive performer. Babe with passing yardage of 400 with 25 out of 47 was the outstanding offensive player.

OCTOBER 23, 1964

at BOSTON

Patriots 24—Chiefs 7 (27,400)

It was all Boston for three periods as the red, white and blue clad Bostonians monopolized the ball game . . . Jim Colclough grabbed passes of 38 and 11 yards for TDs, and Ron Burton rushed over for a third from the one-yard line . . . Eddie Wilson's pass to Mack Lee Hill saved the Chiefs from a shutout with but three seconds remaining in the ball game.

OCTOBER 31, 1964

at NEW YORK

Patriots 14—Jets 35 (45,033)

It was an unhappy Halloween for the Holovak men as a record crowd and New England television audience watched Wahoo McDaniel get things started with a 38-yard interception in the Shea Stadium encounter . . . The Pats were held to 13 first downs as the Jets went ahead 28-0 before the Pats began to pour on the steam . . . Larry Garron provided a ray of hope in the hearts of Boston fans as he scooted to pay dirt with a Parilli pitch on a 52-yard pass play . . . Gino also caught one for 6 from 28 yards out . . . Meanwhile in Buffalo the fans were screaming "Bring on the NFL."

NOVEMBER 6, 1964

at BOSTON

Patriots 25—Oilers 24 (28,161)

Gino "The Miracle Man" Cappelletti and Vito "I Can Run" Parilli combined to pull off a come-from-behind victory over the Houston Oilers . . . The Grand Opera twins provided Boston football fans the greatest game in America . . . Vito faded to pass with but 11 seconds remaining found nobody open and decided to run . . . He stepped out of bounds with one second remaining . . . Cappy calmly kicked the Oilers down the drain from the 41-yard line as the final gun sounded . . . Babe also ran for 98 yards in 8 carries . . . Cappy was awarded the game ball . . . Tonto Shonta was outstanding on defense with 6 clean tackles and 5 assists.

NOVEMBER 15, 1964

at BUFFALO

Patriots 36—Bills 28 (42,308)

Trailing by two touchdowns early in the third period, the Parillian Patriots exploded for two TDs in the space of 80 seconds early in the fourth period and hung on to hand the Buffalo Bills their first defeat in 10 games before the largest crowd to see any sports event in the city of Buffalo . . . It was the third period when Lou Saban sent in Daryle Lamonica in place of Jack Kemp . . . The best defensive line in football blitzed the former Notre Dame star as he was hit so hard by Nick Buoniconti that he dropped the ball which Larry Eisenhower gleefully grabbed . . . The boys from Boston went on to win the big one!!! Game ball went to Babe Parrilli.

NOVEMBER 20, 1964

at BOSTON

Patriots 12—Broncos 7 (24,979)

The Patriots received help from an unexpected source with cheerleaders from Radcliffe College . . . Jack Rudolph provided the first Patriot score as he tackled Jackie Lee for a safety deep in his own end zone . . . Gino Cappelletti kicked the longest field goal of his career as he booted one for 50 yards . . . Tommy Addison had his brightest moment as a Patriot as he scored 23 defensive points with 5 unassisted tackles and 5 assisted tackles . . . Ross O'Hanley grabbed two interceptions.

NOVEMBER 29, 1964

at HOUSTON

Boston 34—Oilers 17 (17,560)

Ross O'Hanley scored his first TD of the season as he returned a George Blanda pass on a 47-yard interception run. Two other former BC Eagles, Art Graham and Jim Colclough, snared two TD passes of 80 and 20 yards each, as the Bay State Babe pitched for 20 out of 36 for an amazing 336 yards. Cappy added 10 to his total . . . Bubba Dee was awarded the game ball.

DECEMBER 6, 1964

at KANSAS CITY

Patriots 31—Chiefs 24 (13,166)

The cardiac kids did it again as they held off a last-minute Kansas City rush to remain in contention for the Eastern Division crown . . . Custer's last stand was a comedy compared to the effort the Chiefs from Kansas City put on for the lads from Boston . . . Don Webb proved to be the hero of this contest as he picked off a Dawson aerial with but seconds remaining . . . J. D. Garrett came of age as a pro as he galloped for 35 yards on a single play in Boston's drive for the final touchdown . . . The incredible Gino Cappelletti broke his own record of 147 points raising his season's total to 155 . . . The victory gave the Pats 10 wins, most ever in any season for Boston . . . The frosting on the cake came in the word that Al Davis' Oakland Raiders had dropped the Buffalo Bills 16-13 . . . The Buffalo loss made the Fenway Park encounter on December 20th the significant one.

DECEMBER 20, 1964

at BOSTON

Patriots 14—Buffalo Bills 24 (38,021)

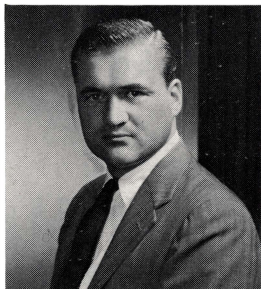

Snow preceded the fans and players at the Fens and continued in blizzard proportions throughout the sad afternoon. Jackie Kemp, with 12 out of 24 for 286 yards and two TDs, joined with Pete Gogolak with 3 points-after and a field goal to make Christmas unhappy for the men of the red, white, and blue. Bright spots in the Patriots attack were provided by Babe Parilli's two payoff pitches to Tony Romeo and Spider Webb's 25-yard scamper to a Jackie Kemp aerial. Jim Colclough led the receivers on both clubs with 6 receptions for 134 yards.

The death of George L. Sargent on April 10, 1962 came as a stunning blow to his best friends.

The Vice President and an owner of the Patriots, he was a member of the University of Virginia eleven.

A group of his closest friends established a Memorial plaque in his name for the Patriots' Most Valuable Player as selected by his teammates at the close of the present season.

This is a most fitting tribute to the late Vice-President of the Patriots, who was described by President Bill Sullivan, Jr., as "The Greatest Patriot of Them All."

ORIGINAL PATRIOTS

Ron Burton, Gino Cappelletti, Jim Colclough, Bob Dee, Larry Garron, Ross O'Hanley, Jack Rudolph, Chuck Shonta, and Bob Yates were members of the Patriots squad which met and defeated the Buffalo Bills in the first game ever played in the American Football League on July 30, 1960. The score of that contest was 28-7 as Bob Dee's recovery of a fumble in the Buffalo end zone sparked the lads from Boston.

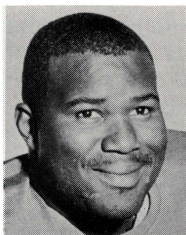

There is one other original member of the A.F.L. now on the Patriots, Dick Felt, who played two seasons with the New York Titans.

Tom Addison LB 29 6:2½ 230 So. Carolina U.

Thomas Marion Addison was born in Lancaster, South Carolina and attended the University of South Carolina where he studied Business Administration . . . Played for the Baltimore Colts in '58 and Philadelphia Eagles in '59 . . . Tom joined the Patriots just before the game with the Chargers in 1960 and has played left linebacker with the Club since that time . . . He has played in every AFL All-Star Game and was elected defensive Captain and Player Representative of the Patriots . . . Tom was also selected by all the players in the League to be President of the Player's Association.

Tom sells Volkswagens for the Annis-Morrill Company and was the driving force behind the Pats' camp for youthful football aspirants held at Curry College . . . Tom, his wife, Barbara, and their two daughters Sandra and Dawn live in Randolph, Mass. . . .

Houston Antwine DT 26 6:1 270 Sou. Illinois U.

Likeable, smiling "Twine" has already become the most feared defensive tackle in the American Football League . . . Originally envisioned as an offensive guard, Pats' Coach Mike Holovak saw Houston's defensive potential and switched him to the Pat's version of the Fearsome Foursome . . . Received a back injury 13th game of 1963 season and was advised to rest for the remainder . . . Scorned the advice and redoubled his efforts to bring Eastern Division Championship to Boston . . . Hobbies include guitar playing and wrestling.

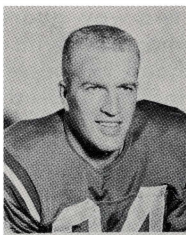

Houston was again selected as All-League tackle in several polls . . . He is customer relations man for Nu-Car Carriers, Inc. . . .

Nick was called "too small for pro football" more than once during his sparkling tenure as Captain of Notre Dame's Fighting Irish, but he has since made his critics eat their words ten times over . . . A native of Springfield, Mass. "Skip" joined the Pats in 1962 . . . He played high school football at Cathedral High in Springfield and as a two-way guard led the Irish in tackles in his senior year with 74 . . . Defensive Coach Walt Michaels of the Jets, himself an All Star in his playing days, used films last season to demonstrate why Nick is considered the best Middle Linebacker in all pro football . . . He was unanimous choice as AFL All League Mike Man following up his selection on the Coaches' All League Team in 1963 . . . Nick, his wife Terrie and their two children live in Randolph, Mass. . . . He attends Suffolk Law School and does some sportscasting for radio station WCOP during the offseason . . .

Ronald Eugene Burton is a native of Springfield, Ohio who was one of Northwestern's all time greats while starring there from 1957 through 1959 . . . His three-year scoring record of 130 points broke the great Otto Graham's mark for the Wildcats . . . Unanimous All-American in '59 . . . Chose Pats over N.F.L. Philadelphia Eagles . . . Workhorse of Pats in '62, Ron suffered a ruptured disc in '63 . . . Despite statements by many that Ron would never play ball again the determined halfback with help from Pat's team surgeon, Dr. Joe Dorgan, played a prominent role in the playoff victory against the Buffalo Bills . . . Ronald spends his spare time selling fuel for New England's #1 distributor of domestic heating oil, the Metropolitan Petroleum

Gino Cappelletti SE 31 6:0 190 Minnesota

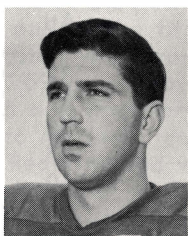

Gino brought great honor to the Patriots last season when he was unanimously voted the Most Valuable Player in the American Football League . . . This was largely due to his breaking his own scoring record with 155 points (7 TD's, 38 PAT's and 25 FGs); setting a new all-time Professional record with six field goals in a single game (at Denver, Oct. 4) and his unforgettable last-second 41-yard field goal that defeated Houston, 25 to 24, at Fenway Park. "Duke" is one of the original Patriots . . . Joined the club as a defensive back where he remained until the final game of the 1960 season . . . Coach Mike Holovak suggested the Keewatin, Minn. native try split end . . . Even as the switch of Houston Antwine from offense to defense produced an All-Star performer, the witch of Cappy had the same happy result . . . Kicked four field goals in playoff victory for the Eastern Division title at Buffalo in 1963 . . . He has gained over a mile in his career with the Pats . . . During the past off-season, Gino was named Sports Director of WBZ-TV, Channel 4 in Boston and served as a good will ambassador for Allied Chemical Co. . . . He, his wife Sandy and their daughter, Gina Marie, now reside permanently in Wellesley, Mass.

Jim Colclough OE 28 6:0 185 Boston College

James Michael Colclough has been a Patriots receiver since July 4th 1960 . . . The spirited and eager former Quincy High and Boston College star has caught 49, 42, 40, 42 and 32 passes . . . Nicknamed Coleslaw by roommates, Ross O'Hanley and Ron Hall because of his last name, Jim often makes coleslaw out of opposing defensive backs . . . An all Catholic selection in '58, Jimmy spent a season as a defensive back with the Montreal Alouettes. After a brief tenure in the insurance business, Jim has spent his off-season hours in Youth Service Work . . . Babe and Jimmy can often be seen going over pass patterns after practice . . . Jimmy, his wife, Jo-Ann and their three children, Michael, Michelle, and Steven, are permanent residents of Braintree.

Bob Dee DE 30 6:3 245 Holy Cross

"Bubba" was one of the first to ink a Pat's contract after Boston was granted a franchise in November of '59 . . . Bob graduated from Holy Cross in '55 and then served two seasons with the Quantico Marines . . . He then joined the Washington Redskins and was a regular as a rookie and sophomore . . . Coach Mike Nixon tried to persuade Bob to remain with the NFL Entry, but the Braintree native wanted to be close to home . . . Line Coach at Holy Cross in '59, he answered the call of the Patriots and has been a fixture at defensive end since that time . . . Bob's mother was an olympic star . . . The former Marine Captain served as Co-Captain of the Pats with Tony Sardisco for two seasons. All Star in '61 and '63. Voted to the All-Star team for the third time last season . . . Bubba has become an entrepreneur as his firm, Newport Realty, is selling real estate at a rapid pace . . . He recently built a new home in his native Braintree where he now resides with his wife, Beverly, and their two children . . . Ellis gained 531 yards rushing for a 6.6 average in the tough gulf Coast Conference last season.

Jim Nance FB 22 6:1 225 Syracuse

"Jarring" Jim is the 3rd leading ground gainer in Syracuse history behind Jim Brown and the late Ernie Davis . . . His 1605 yards was all the more remarkable because Jim was a fullback . . . Other 2 greats were halfbacks . . . "This could be the most important single signing in our history," says Pats' President Bill Sullivan . . . Coach Schwartzwalder ranks Jim in the Davis-Brown class . . . What impressed Pats Coach Mike Holovak about Jim is his remarkable blocking ability, "We need a big man to protect the passer," commented Holovak . . . The Pats defeated the Chicago Bears in the race for Jim's signature . . . "Bo" as he was known to his Syracuse teammates last year, led the Orangemen to a 7-3 season and a position against LSU in the Sugar Bowl, grinding out 951 yards to rank #5 in the nation . . . As a wrestler, Jim's record was 91-0-1 . . . He was NCAA Heavyweight Wrestling Champ in '63 and '65.

George Pyne, Jr. DT 23 6:5 290 Olivet

A native of Milford, George may develop into the Patriot's first 300-pound lineman . . . He experienced the once in a lifetime thrill of a defensive lineman during his sophomore year. That season, 1962, he intercepted a Kalamazoo pass and ran it back 46 yards for a touchdown . . . Small college All-American as senior after winning All-Michigan honors three years . . . Won All-Scholastic award two years at Milford High.

Jim Whalen SE 22 6:2 210 Boston College

All East last season and the year before . . . Expected to follow in footsteps of Artie Graham, his predecessor on the Heights by two years . . . "Jumping" Jim reached his career high last fall with 31 catches for 398 yards and 3 TDs . . . In three varsity seasons Jim grabbed 73 passes for 1230 yards and 11 TDs . . . Jim lives in Cambridge, Mass. about 10 minutes from the Pats' Fenway Park home.
