WHO QUALIFIES FOR PLAYOFFS

The top two teams in each division, along with the next two wild-card teams with the best records, regardless of division, will comprise the eight-team field for the playoffs.

All playoff rounds will be determined on a best-of-seven game basis.

The format calls for the team with the best regular-season record meeting the wild card team with the worst record, the second best record meeting the other wild card team, the next best club facing the next worse and the No. 4 team opposing the team with the No. 5 record.

The wild card teams will be determined in order of most points, most victories, fewest defeats and best goals-for and goals-against percentage.

A record playoff jackpot of $740,000 has been established.

WHA RULES DIFFERENCES

During the 1974 exhibition season, the World Hockey Association will experiment with one major rule change.

- 1 - The center red line will not be used in exhibition games between two WHA teams. This means a pass may travel across one blue line to the other blue line without an offside being called.

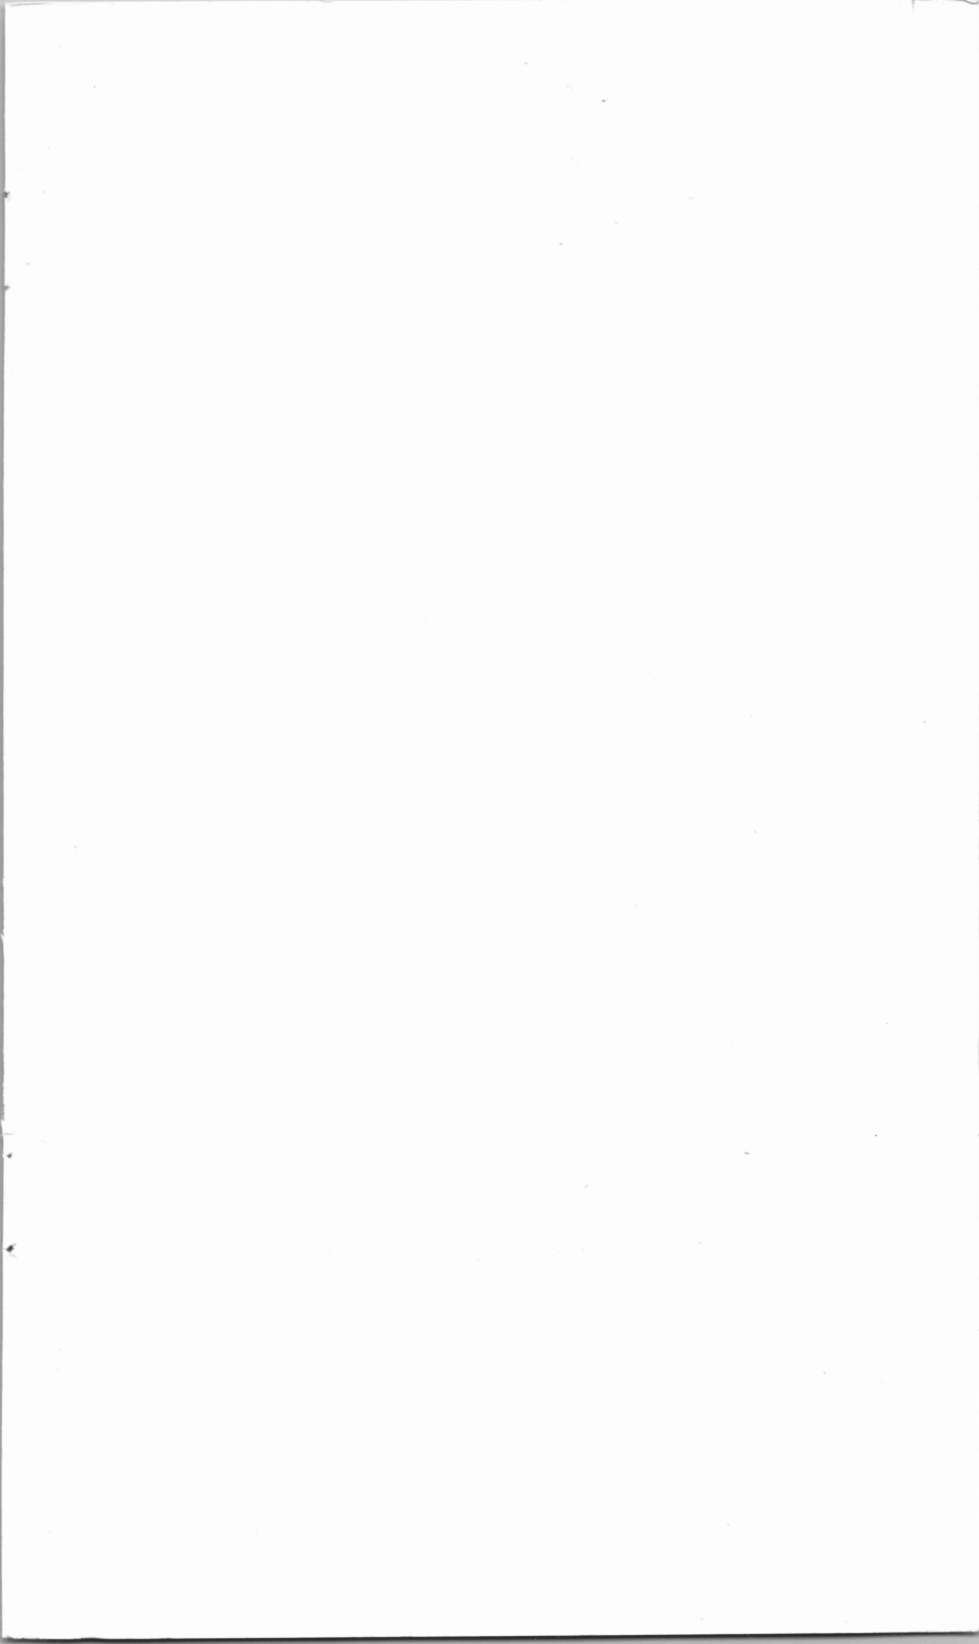

During both the exhibition and regular seasons, the following rules are in effect.

- 1 - In case of a tie score at the end of regulation play, a ten-minute sudden death overtime period will be conducted.
- 2 - When a team is in a shorthanded penalty situation, the defending team must stick handle the puck out of its zone before icing the puck.
- 3 - A player may pass the puck from inside his own blue line to a teammate beyond the center red line, providing the puck precedes the player across the center red line and the receiver takes the puck ahead of his body.
- 4 - The WHA has an allowable stick curvature of an inch and one quarter.
- 5 - In the WHA, the third man in a fight receives a ten minute misconduct penalty and is assessed a $100 fine.
- 6 - There are no assistant captains on teams, only captains.
